

ROOSEVELT WAR DEBT POLICY

SACRED OBLIGATION

EXPECTS SUBSTANTIAL SACRIFICE BY DEBTORS

MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

(Special to "Telegraph")

Washington, June 1. America's present war debt policy as enunciated by President Roosevelt to-day is not likely to provoke any excitement either in the United States or abroad.

Adherence to the doctrine that if debtors can afford heavy armaments bills they can afford to meet their obligations is the principal feature.

President Roosevelt's views on war debts were expressed to-day in a Message to Congress, in which he warns debtor nations that the United States would be swayed in judging the matter of revision of existing agreements by the extent to which debtors diverted their natural resources to armament expenditures and to other unproductive purposes.

AMERICA EXPECTS.

The President does not recommend any legislation, but lengthily reviews the whole war debt situation and draws attention to the fact that all developments have been made public as soon as they occurred.

He concludes: "The American people are not disposed to place an impossible burden upon debtors, but nevertheless we are justified in asking that a substantial sacrifice should be made by debtors, in order to meet their obligation."—United Press.

SACRED OBLIGATIONS.

Washington, June 1. President Roosevelt's long-awaited War Debt Message declares that legislation in the present session is neither necessary nor desirable.

"We are using every means to persuade our debtors of the sacredness of their obligations and to assure them of our willingness to discuss frankly and fully special circumstances relating to the means of payment."

"The repayment of the debts has gravely complicated our trade and financial relationships with borrowing nations for many years."

FINLAND THE PARAGON.

"Finland remains the only foreign government which has met all payments punctually and fully."

"The American people will certainly be swayed by the use that debtors make of their available resources, whether they are applied for purposes of recovery and reasonable payment on a debt owed, or unproductive nationalistic expenditure."—Reuter.

Washington, June 1. Congress saw the last of the Stock Market Control Bill yesterday, when the House of Representatives adopted it and the Senate approved the conference report.

The Bill now goes to President Roosevelt for signature.—Reuter.

TREASURY BILLS

London, June 1. The total amount applied for in tenders for £40,000,000 Treasury bills at three months was $37,725,000, the average rate per cent. being 17/2 5/4, as compared with 17/3 1/2 last week.—British Wireless.

Washington, June 1. The Senate to-night rejected Mr. de Valera's Bill providing for its own abolition.

Government spokesmen argued persuasively, but made no impression on the great majority of the members of the Second Chamber.

The Bill was finally rejected by 33 votes to fifteen, and it will thus be a year before constitutional procedure will permit Mr. de Valera to give the Bill the force of law.

The Opposition throughout the debate vehemently attacked the measure.

REPUBLIC THE GOAL.

Mr. Connolly, the Minister for Lands and Fisheries, complained of the Senate's destructive treatment of the Government's legislation and declared that the Irish people accepted the Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1922 as a stepping-stone to national freedom.

The Government did not propose to halt on the way to an Irish Republic any longer than was necessary.

Mr. de Valera, winding-up the debate, said that the Bill had been introduced to enable the Irish people to march along a road which they had determined for themselves.—Reuter Special.

London, June 1. Colonel Colville, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, is the principal British delegate in the conversations which are proceeding in London between Anglo-French departmental experts to prepare the way for negotiating new commercial agreements.

These preliminary negotiations, which were resumed on Wednesday after their suspension during the Easter holidays, are making slow but adequate progress, and it may prove possible to carry them through without recalling M. Lamoureux, French Minister of Commerce, to London.—British Wireless.

FOUR BATSMEN EXCEED 200

Seventeen Centuries In Three Days

London, June 1. In first-class cricket matches which ended to-day scores of four batsmen exceeded 200 runs and centuries were made by thirteen others. The Australian, McCabe, made 240 runs out of total of 629 against Surrey who declared at 475 for 7 and then made 162 for two wickets when match was declared drawn.—British Wireless.

LLOYD GEORGE'S SURREY HOME MENACED BY FIRE

VETERAN M.P. IN ROLE OF FIREMAN

TROOPS FIGHT HEATH OUTBREAK

6-HOUR BATTLE

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, June 2. Mr. Lloyd George, the veteran Liberal leader, took a prominent role as fire-fighter yesterday when fire broke out on a thousand-acre Surrey common yesterday.

The fire started on the common near Mr. Lloyd George's home at Churt and he superintended the labours of his farm staff, armed with spades, in trying to beat out the flames which attained extensive proportions.

Troops were rushed from Aldershot and fire brigades from all the district round, as well as military fire brigades from Aldershot assisted in combating the outbreak.

TROOPS HARD WORKED.

Hundreds of troops from the Welch and Wiltshire Regiments, wearing steel helmets and equipped with gas-masks, feverishly dug trenches to check the spread of the flames, which was rendered exceedingly difficult owing to the dryness of the undergrowth.

Aeroplane directed the fire-fighting effectively.

Mr. Lloyd George's houses were in the danger zone and were practically smoked out, but they were undamaged when the fire was controlled about six hours after the outbreak.—Reuter Special.

INDUSTRIAL UNREST

TOLEDO APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

INTERVENTION REQUESTED

(Special to "Telegraph")

Toledo, Ohio, June 1. The strike situation is again becoming threatening, the workers showing growing dissatisfaction with the failure of their leaders to secure acceptance of their demands.

As a result of the unrest, the leaders, represented on the Central Labour Union, have telegraphed to President Roosevelt asking for his intervention in the local strike in order to prevent a general strike and new riots.

The President's intervention has also been sought by the steel and textile interests on the labour side, according to a message from Washington.

TEXTILES AND STEEL.

The labour leaders are confident that the President will do his utmost to arbitrate in the steel industry and textile industry conflicts affecting almost a million workers as soon as he returns to Washington on Monday.

It is believed that he will start negotiations similar to those that prevented the strike in the automobile industry.—United Press.

ROOSEVELT POLICY CRITICISM

NOT BAD IN ITSELF BUT ILL-TIMED

BRITISH VIEWS

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, June 1. President Roosevelt's plans for a Hawaiian holiday has financial London puzzled.

Those who watch the numerous "American charts" sprinkled through the financial district, with American commodity prices and the Federal Reserve Board indices zigzagging up and down seem to think this is a strange time to adjourn Congress, slam down the rolloper desk and sail to Hawaii.

Still more perplexing to financial circles here, is the President's action in placing the Stock Exchange Bill ahead of other measures which seem to the Transatlantic eye, more fundamental to his recovery programme.

VINDICTIVE PASSIONS.

The Financial News voices this perplexity as follows:

"We cannot fail to notice in the President a current tendency to devote himself to checking 1929 abuses rather than to finding a way out of the 1934 depression, to indulge vindictive passions rather than to work out constructive ideas. It would repay the President over and over again to have industry and finance wholeheartedly on his side at this stage, even if he intended to curb their liberties severely later. Much of his current policy, while not bad in itself, is ill-timed, and it suggests caution in making American commitments."

On the prospects of American stock speculators invading the London market, opinion is divided.

"BAD MONEY."

Evening Standard thinks it a fine idea, but several financial editors point out severely that it would be "bad money" and London can do without it.

The truth is that share prices are so high that investment advisers are at their wits' end to make prudent recommendations, and they don't want further acceleration.

Professor Spahr's book attacking the "orthodox" point of view, Professor Warren's currency theories is, rather surprisingly, criticised in the conservative English financial papers.

NEW CURRENCY IDEAS.

While they have no love for Professor Warren's theories, they point out that there is a real monetary factor in depression and that nothing is to be gained by simply advising further deflation. These reviews suggest that London is more hospitable to new currency ideas than it was, say, two years ago, though it is still a long way from Professors Warren and Rogers.—United Press.

SVEN HEDIN'S EXPERIENCES

MADE PRISONER BY GEN. MA

BADLY TREATED IN SINKIANG

Stockholm, June 1. It is revealed that Sven Hedin experienced extraordinary difficulties on his expedition in Central Asia.

He was taken prisoner by the rebel Chinese leader in Sinkiang, General Ma, when he encountered the rival forces of the Sinkiang Government and General Ma at Korla, in Eastern Turkistan.

General Ma treated him very badly, also seizing the expedition's lorries, and two Swedish and two Mongolian drivers, pressing them into service for sixteen days.

When the Government troops were defeated by the rebels at Easter, the party was released.

Sven Hedin is continuing his journey, exploring the possibilities of a motor road from Sinkiang to the Yellow Sea.—Reuter.

WATER SHORTAGE AT HOME

MINISTRY OF HEALTH ACTIVE

London, June 1. The authorities responsible for water supplies are framing plans for making use of fresh sources, and conserving existing ones, in places where there is or may be a shortage.

Sir Hilton Young, Minister of Health, speaking at Windsor, said applications for orders under emergency cases passed by Parliament were coming in. He was arranging for starting a conference of three representative bodies—the British Waterworks Association, the Institute of Engineering, and the Water Companies Association—to take action in co-operation with the Ministry. He had also appointed a special officer of the Ministry to promote the formation of regional water committees.—British Wireless.

BUREAU GIVEN NEW TASK

(Special to "Telegraph")

Geneva, June 1. Many of the most prominent Government delegates to the Disarmament Conference are leaving Geneva, indicating that hope of saving anything is practically nil.

The General Commission has been postponed until Wednesday, Tuesday having first been decided upon.

The Bureau of the Conference will be expected to submit recommendations on Wednesday and the extra day was thought necessary to enable them to complete the task.

Mr. Henderson explained that a number of new proposals have been submitted that will require careful study.

H.M.S. Wild Swan has been rushed to the Pratas this morning following the receipt of an S.O.S. call from Japanese steamer Tone Maru.

No details of the mishap have been received, but it is believed that the vessel has been wrecked in fog.

The Tone Maru is a 4,070 tons steamer owned by the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha.

Later.

The Tone Maru, on her way from Milke to Singapore went aground at about 10.10 p.m. yesterday about five miles from Pratas Lighthouse, and sent out a wireless message soon afterwards stating that she was making water in No. 1 hold.

Attempts were being made to refloat her under her own power.

At 1 a.m. this morning, however, a further message was received asking that a salvage boat be despatched.

The Wild Swan was on exercises when she received instructions to proceed to the scene, where she has arrived.

HEALTH CAMPAIGN.

OVALTINE DISTRIBUTED TO SCHOOL CHILDREN

Over seven thousand local school children of all nationalities and ages experienced the pleasant surprise during the past fortnight of having free cups of Ovaltine served to them during the morning recess.

When one considers that sixteen of the leading schools in the Colony participated in this novel health drive and that the Ovaltine was prepared on the spot and served hot in separate hygienic cups, in one instance at the rate of eight hundred children in half an hour, some idea may be formed of the colossal scale on which it was held.

The organisers of the campaign are The Advertising and Publicity Bureau Ltd., publicity agents to A. Wandor and Co. Ltd., the manufacturers of the world famous beverage.

A large dummy tin of Ovaltine propelled on a tricycle carried the materials from school to school, whilst two English girls dressed as Ovaltine dairymaids, were in attendance.

The schools which participated were La Salle College; Central British School; St. Paul's School; St. Mary's Convent; St. Stephen's Girls' College; Maryknoll Convent; Italian Convent (English School); Italian Convent (Chinese School); French Convent (English School); French Convent (Chinese School); St. Paul's Boys' School; St. Paul's Girls' School; Fatima College; St. Joseph's College; King's College; and Queen's College.

A simple missing letter competition with over $200 in cash prizes was held concurrently with the distribution of Ovaltine, each school receiving $15 in prize money, besides consolation gifts of tins of Ovaltine and gramophone records. The contest was held simultaneously by all the various schools last Friday.

Cine-films were taken at each school.

JAPAN POLITICS

ADMIRAL T. SAKANO'S RESIGNATION

Tokyo, June 1.

While speculation continues rife regarding the possibility of Cabinet changes being made very shortly, a sensation has been caused by the resignation of Rear-Admiral Tsuneyoshi Sakano, chief of the Naval Propaganda Section of the Navy Office.

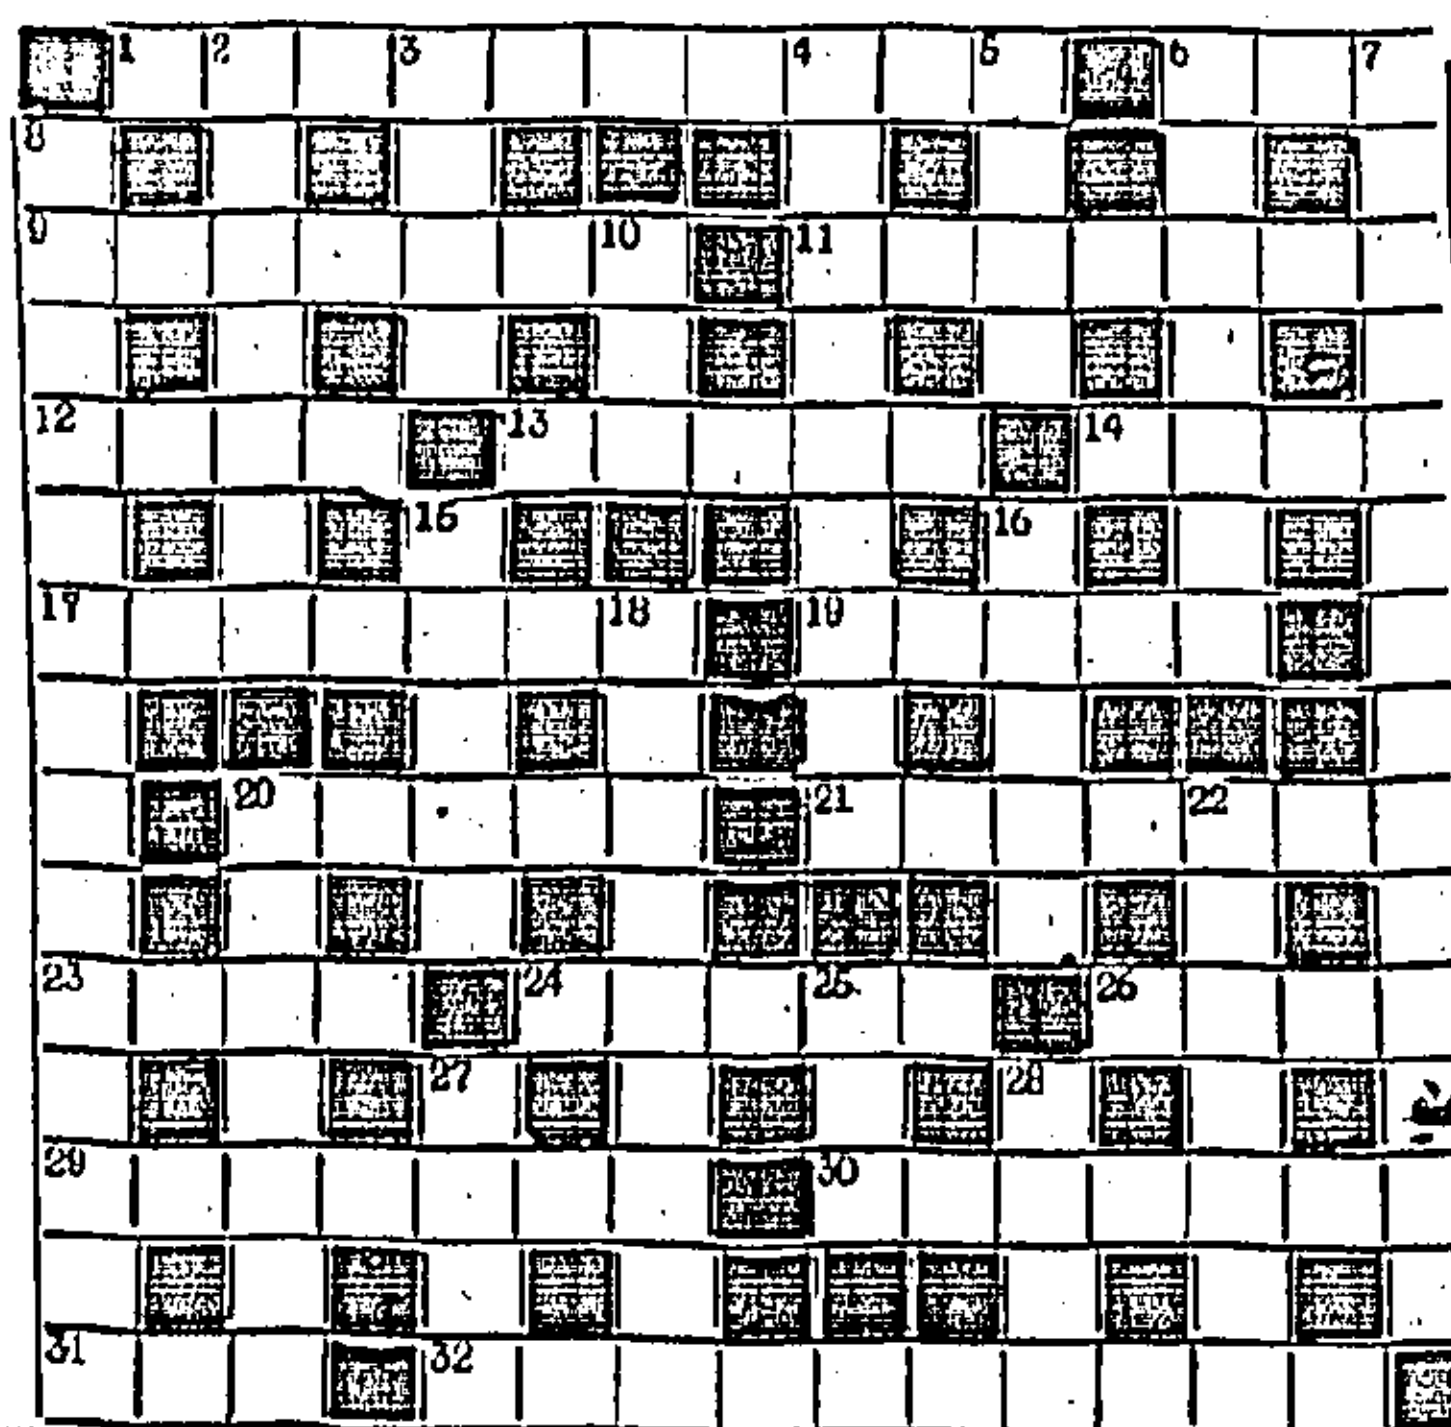

Admiral Sakano's resignation follows criticism levelled against him, aroused by his informal statement, issued recently, to the effect that the Navy was not opposed to General Ugaki succeeding Viscount Saito as Prime Minister.

General Ugaki, who is Governor-General of Korea, is at present visiting Tokyo and is considered the most likely successor to the Premiership should Viscount Saito resign. His elevation to the office, however, is strongly opposed by certain powerful sections of the Army and Navy.—Reuter.

and it is hoped that these will be shown to the children at a later date, in conjunction with a number of other British films of news and topical interest, which have been specially taken by the manufacturers of Ovaltine for children throughout the world. Similarly the films taken here will be sent home to be shown to British school children.

Parents who are interested in procuring additional copies of photographs of their children taken during this event are requested to apply to The Advertising and Publicity Bureau Ltd.

Married Flirts

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

GYPSEY MORELL and TOM WEAVER were married the same day as LILA HOTALING and BIRK HISS. Lila expects to live in luxury, while Gypsy intends to go on with her job, teaching in a settlement school. After returning from her honeymoon in Europe Lila invites the Weavers to dinner. Among the guests is wealthy MARKO BROUGHTON, who once asked Gypsy to marry him. He showers her with attentions which she accepts because she is jealous of Tom's interest in LILA BRANCHAUD. After the party Tom and Gypsy quarrel, but peace is later restored.

CHAPTER XV

The family was coming to Sunday tea. That had to be lived through. Not for worlds would Gypsy passionately to herself would she let them see what had happened to her marriage. They were not to suspect that the very foundations of her world were crashing around her.

She dragged herself from bed at 8 o'clock. She hadn't slept for hours, anyway. There was no use trying to. She dressed, glancing drowsily at herself in the mirror. Why, she had aged overnight, she told herself. Tom still slept, heavily but guiltily, on the daybed. He had the quilt which Gypsy had coldly given him. He looked somehow forlorn and defenceless in his sleep. Young, troubled, pale.

But she would not forgive him—no, not she! He had betrayed an unwritten pact the day before.

Languid, heavy-eyed, she went about the business of preparing breakfast. She had to eat something, she reminded herself. Even if Tom didn't love her any more, even if it didn't matter to anyone whether she lived or died (she was ignoring a large family of Morells for the moment) she had to have her breakfast.

Surprisingly enough, she brought an appetite to it and sat, perched on the white painted kitchen stool, sipping her hot coffee.

What a fool she had been to think, lying home the night before, that she would tell Tom she was working for Marko—that his money had bought the platinum watch! Now she would keep that affair to herself. She needed, she told herself coldly, every penny she could earn. If Tom were going to behave in this unforeseen, this outrageous fashion, surely she had a right to earn money in any honourable way which presented itself.

After a time he wandered out, looking big-eyed and sleep-ridden and sheepish.

"Good morning!" Gypsy's reply was glacially polite. "Will you have some coffee?" She glanced out of the window with studied indifference. "Your orange juice is in the icebox."

"No, thanks." He didn't say his head ached but he looked it. And presently she could hear vigorous shower and through it Tom's vigorous slapping, all part of the morning ritual, once dear and amusing, now only reminding her that they had known happier times.

But she had a busy morning before her. She had no time, really, to sit about and morn. There were a thousand things to do all ways on Sunday—gloves to be washed and mended, stockings doted, the laundry to be sorted and put away. Besides this there were all her extra preparations for the family tea. Little sandwiches and a hot dish to be got ready, and the house put into apple pie order for the expected guests.

Tom helped. He reappeared shining, brushed and shaven, smelling of soap and lotion. He moved table and chairs wordlessly. He asked if he could do anything else.

He was properly and humbly male. Gypsy answered him with monosyllables. But under her anger was a genuine fear. Was it going to be like this for always? She felt as though her face were a frozen mask. She just couldn't be nice; couldn't be natural.

At last Tom's composure broke. "Look, Gypsy," he said plaintively. "Let's have it out. I can't stand this."

It's none of my doing, Gypsy thought rebelliously. I didn't gamble away our money. It's no fault of mine. But she listened to him, nevertheless. She could not entirely steel her heart against him. He'd been at a loose end, she said, the day before. She was busy—he didn't have anything to do. Some of the fellows had gone over to the club—and a game had started. At first he hadn't meant to get in. But he had. He had won, to begin with. He had got excited. Then luck had changed. He hadn't been able to stop.

"How much?" She didn't look at him.

"Seventy dollars." His voice was very low.

"Oh, Tommy." But the word was enough. The ice around her heart had cracked open. She was in his arms and she was crying, and he was smoothing her hair and telling her he never would again. She knew that, didn't she? And he was a bound—he knew that! She was wasting her time with him.

Gypsy put her hand over his mouth. "You're not to say that—over." She felt strong and maternal and brave. Her love went out to him like a tide.

So it was that the Morells, trooping in at half past four, found the vision of a united pair. Gypsy, her brown curls shining, in a bright frock, and Tom with his arm around her.

So the storm blew over for the moment and the little domestic bark was steered into safe waters. But it was hard, making up for Tom's losses. They felt the pinch of it all through January, and, though Gypsy said nothing, Tom felt it none the less and said to himself grimly that he had learned his lesson.

Gypsy's Saturdays at Marko's continued. All her fear had vanished now. After that first Saturday she saw him only once or twice. Her conscience no longer troubled her. She was getting through the work splendidly. The richness and the comfort of the big room received her agreeably whenever she came. Bates had taken to serving her tea. Gypsy would look up to see the silver tray with its delicate china and linen before her.

"Mr. Broughton said you were to have it, Madam."

She no longer felt strange in the big library. It seemed a sort of second home to her and the personality of the powerful man who owned it emanated almost tangibly from its walls. Marko came to stand in her mind, for something fine and generous and noble. People who talked about him, she told herself, were merely jealous.

There were always those who maligned a truly great man. It had been insinuated that Marko's way with women was not always as honourable as might be. She didn't believe it! Look how he had treated her! Why, she might have been his own sister.

On the fourth Saturday she had planned to leave rather early. As usual, she had told Tom a white lie about meeting someone for shopping. But the difficulty of making Saturday a permanent engagement was growing. Surely some time soon he would begin to suspect. This evening they were asked to dine with some office acquaintances of Tom's, a semi-Bohemian couple who lived in the purlieus of Greenwich Village, and Gypsy had hoped to reach home by 5 o'clock.

"Don't bother to make tea for me to-day, Bates," she had said, when she arrived. "I'm leaving earlier than usual."

The cataloguing was more than halfway finished. Would she be glad or sorry when it was over? These afternoons had been pleasant enough. They had even (she had to admit it) the spice of danger which makes any adventure seem attractive. For just a little while she could play, if she liked, at the role of being mistress of this beautiful place. It was innocent enough—it harmed no one.

At last she put away pencils and pads, covered the typewriter and resigned it to its cave of darkness. She was just about to ring for Bates, to secure once more the custody of her hat and coat, when she heard a familiar voice in the drawing room.

"Don't trouble, Bates," she heard Lila say. "I'll wait right here. Mr. Broughton will be home directly. He said so."

Gypsy's hands flew to her throat. Lila, of all people! Oh, she didn't want to be found here. It wouldn't matter what she said or how she tried to explain, Lila simply would not understand. Her eyebrows would go up, she would look quizzical and sophisticated and amused. No, she couldn't—wouldn't bear it!

Wildly she looked about for a method of escape. But a penthouse 20 stories up offers few of these. She could, of course, ask Bates to smuggle her out the service entrance but that would put a strange face on the whole affair, lend it an indecorum it was far from owning. She could wait in her room, trusting that Marko would soon get rid of his caller. On the other hand, at any moment Lila might saunter in, in search of cigarettes—or a book. What on earth was she to do?

The high studio windows were curtained in dark red damask, fold on thick fold. Gypsy dived for an instant with the idea of hiding her slim self behind one of these, but the whole thing seemed too melodramatic for words. It was too much like the second act in a society comedy.

Beyond the iron gates which separated the drawing room from the library she could hear Lila moving about, humming softly.

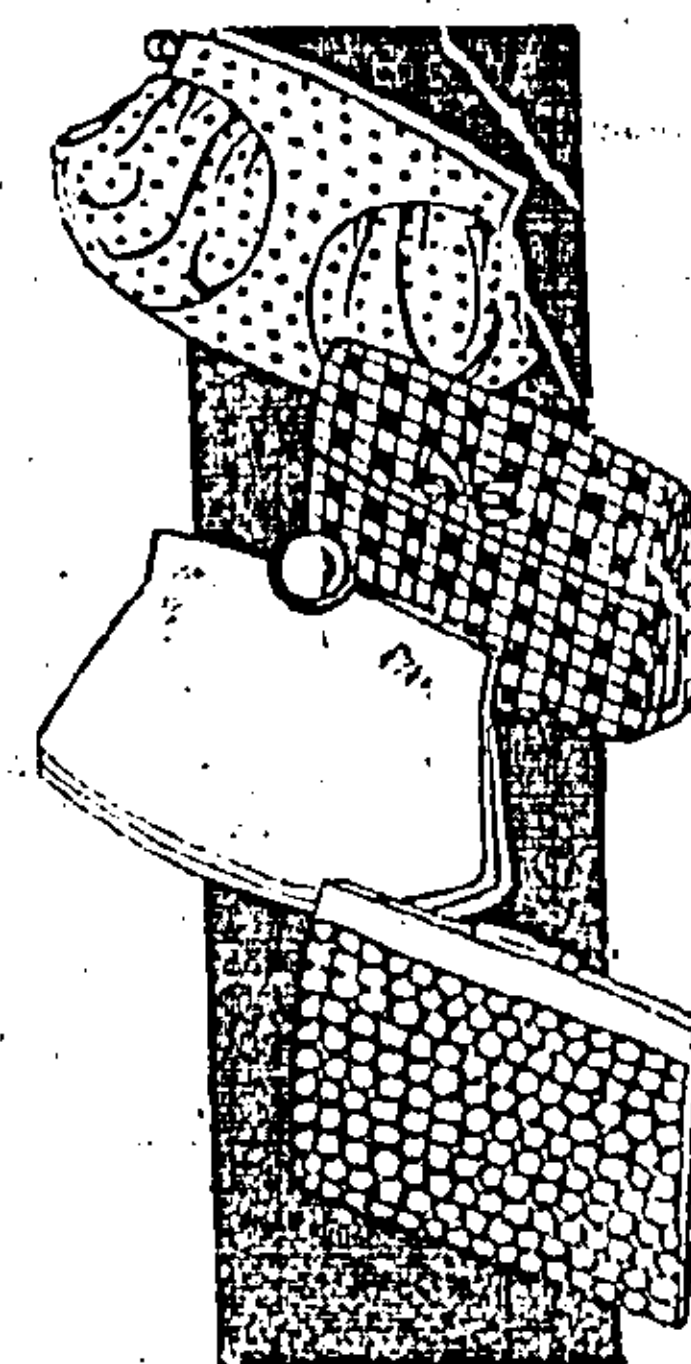

"She'll come in. She'll find me," Gypsy thought, despairingly. "No matter what I say, she'll not believe it."

She sat, very still and small, in the growing darkness. She simply must get out of this. It was an absurd situation. Her cheeks flared hotly at the thought of Lila's amused air, if she should stroll in.

Gypsy glanced at the clock. It was five minutes past five. She stood up, bracing herself for the encounter. No matter what Lila said or thought, she had to walk out of that room at that moment. Her foot was on the threshold, her hand at the gates behind the velvet curtains. Her heart was going like a triphammer.

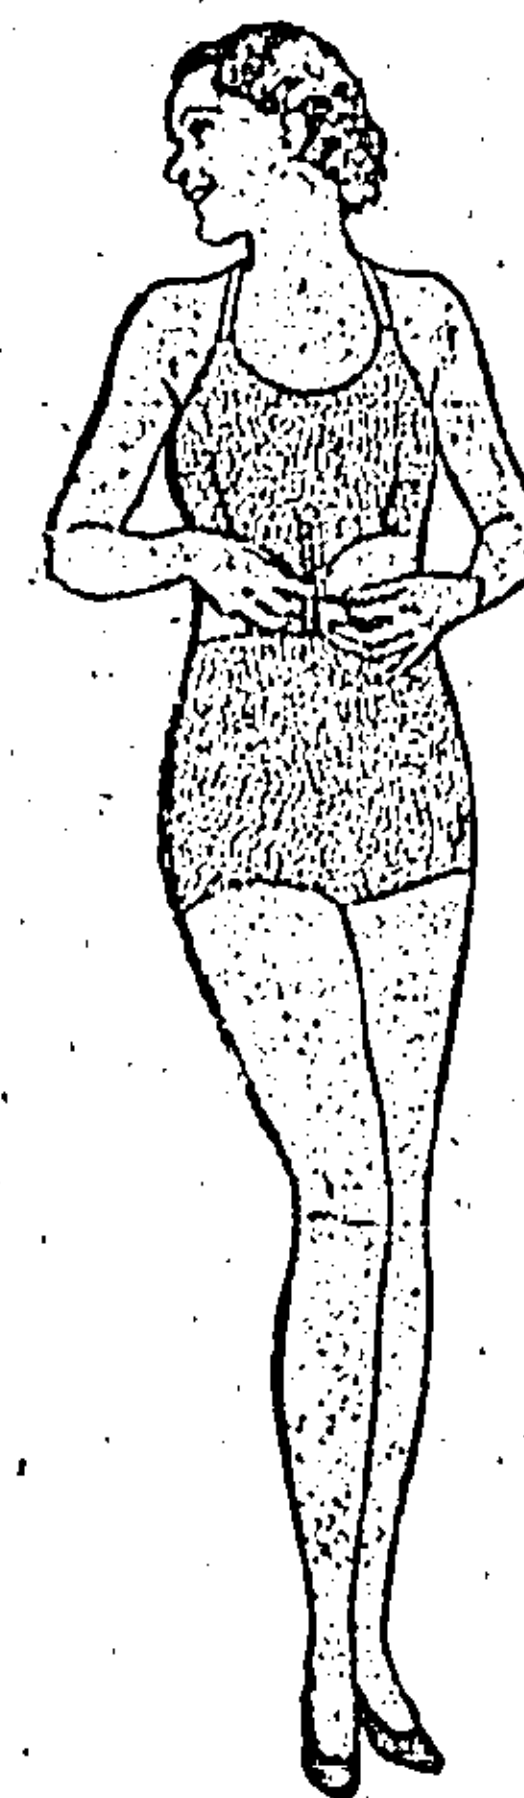

"I thought you were gone, Madam." Instead of Lila, Bates stood at the fireplace. Lila's fur lay across a chairback, her scent lingered on the air. Gypsy murmured something hasty and low and sped across the room like an arrow. "Luck was with her! Lila had gone into Marko's dressing room to powder her nose!"

She was safe. She could escape without being seen. (To Be Continued.)

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

To The Theatregoers of Hong Kong and Environs:

The Management of the QUEEN'S THEATRE has the honour to announce the advent of what is, past peradventure, the most pretentious theatrical attraction ever to visit the Far East.

Commencing Sunday matinee, June 10, and continuing for a strictly limited engagement only, the Greater MARCUS SHOW of 1934 will be offered at the QUEEN'S THEATRE. The company numbers seventy persons and is by far the most populous theatrical organization that has ever been brought to the Orient from abroad. Long regarded as among the foremost of American extravaganzas, the Greater MARCUS SHOW of 1934 is being presented in the Eastern Hemisphere precisely it was for many seasons in the leading legitimate playhouses of the United States and Canada * * * * * WITHOUT abridgement.

The Greater MARCUS SHOW of 1934 will come to HONG KONG directly following its amazingly successful run at Shanghai where it enjoyed a run of six weeks, more than duplicating there its sensational stay of fifty days at Nippon Gekijo, Tokyo. Aside from the popular reaction as testified by the lengthy engagements of the Greater MARCUS SHOW of 1934 in both Tokyo and Shanghai, the press of the two cities were in unanimity in lauding alike the merit of the presentations and the enterprise of its entrepreneurs in bringing productions of such opulence and artistic worth to the Far East.

Three different and distinct extravaganzas will be presented by the Greater MARCUS SHOW during its brief stand at the QUEEN'S. LA VIE PAREE, a revue in two acts and thirty scenes—many highly bizarre and spectacular, will be the inaugural bill starting Sunday matinee, June 10. Later BROADWAY MERRY-GO-ROUND and OKAY will be staged.

Two complete, two-and-three-quarter-hour, all-flesh—no picture—stage performances will be given every day * * * * * starting at 5:30 and 9:15 P.M.

Despite the large expense of touring an attraction of this magnitude in the Orient the PRICES SCALE AT THE QUEEN'S will NOT EXCEED the tariff in vogue for the Greater MARCUS SHOW during its appearances in the first class theatres of the United States and Canada and will, in fact, BE LESS than the scales charged in Tokyo (Y7.00) and Shanghai (MS6.00) * * * * * Following the the prices that will prevail during the engagement at the QUEEN'S * * * * *

REDUCTION EXPECTED IN BRITISH RENTAL

London, June 1. The Postmaster General, Sir Kingsley Wood, is expected next week to announce in the House of Commons the reduction in telephone rental charges. This has largely been made possible by the great increase, in the last year or two, in the number of telephone subscribers.—British Wire.

SCHOOL PROBLEMS

At a moment when Hongkong is beginning to interest itself in technical education, it is worth noting that the subject is engaging attention at home in connection with the demand which is being widely voiced for the raising of the school age. Opinion is now becoming consolidated in the direction of viewing a higher elementary school age as a necessity, both as a desirable piece of educational reform and as a contribution towards the relief of unemployment. But the fact is becoming increasingly recognised that such a move should go hand in hand with school reform, since the mere putting of another year on school life would, under existing circumstances, have little real educational value. The need, therefore, is that some scheme of reorganisation should be put into effect, preferably on the lines of the Hadow plan, which would provide senior schools with specialised tendencies in preparation for industrial and commercial life. If this idea were adopted, the case for raising the school age would be immeasurably strengthened. How serious the present position is may be gathered from the fact that at the commencement of the present year there were nearly 200,000 unemployed juveniles in England and Wales. It is, moreover, estimated that in three years' time there will be almost 2,200,000 young persons between the ages of 14 and 18 available for employment, and it is becoming clear that industry will not be able to absorb these unless adults are to be displaced. In this connection, it must be remembered that a lad of 14 is almost as good a machine-minder as a man of 40—and he is cheaper. The result, unless measures of some kind are taken, must inevitably be the exploitation of school-leavers at the expense of their parents. With conditions as they are, the time does seem opportune for raising of the school age. There is no shortage of school places, there are large numbers of teachers waiting to be absorbed into the service, and, above all, there is the fact that thousands of children are being turned adrift with nothing to do. If the Government would raise the school-leaving age to 15, and remove a whole age group of potentially unemployed adolescents from the labour market, unemployment among juveniles would be reduced to that extent. But it is one thing to keep students at school, and another to see that they are benefitfully employed there. Hence the demand for simultaneous provision of technical training, so that when the student eventually leaves he will at least have, for his future well-being, specialised knowledge of some kind.

NOTES OF THE DAY

WAR IN ARABIA

When the reader in Hongkong picks up his newspaper to find a brief cable stating that Ibn Saud is leading his forces against the Imam of Yemen, it seems as remote and unimportant as if the war were being fought on the moon, and yet Ibn Saud is one of the world's most romantic figures of today. Ibn Saud is the Moslem Roundhead, the Moslem Puritan. With his Wahabism he has almost swept the boards in Arabia. With the establishment of virtual hegemony over the land of Yemen, Ibn Saud is the first human being since Mohammed, who has really ruled practically all of the sandy waste of Arabia with its fierce and jealous tribes.

IBN SAUD'S VICISSITUDES

The little wars that made this possible were full of treacheries. Like the Arabian sands, Ibn would gather tribes into his armies and like the sands they would flow through his fingers at the first sign of defeat or the prospect of more loot by deserting to the other side. Ibn's fate was to be conqueror and conqueror over and over again, but gradually he extended his sway. The world war came and went. Ibn Saud was a friend of England but he managed mainly to maintain a benevolent neutrality. The time was coming when he wanted to measure swords with Hussein, whom Britain had set up as King of the Hedjaz, with its great Moslem holy cities of Mecca and Medina. At last in 1924 his opportunity came. He walked through Hussein's forces as if they were paper. Mecca fell into his hands and, later, Medina and Jeddah. Hussein fled on an English ship. Ibn became King of the Hedjaz, as well as of Njed.

IMAM'S DEFIANCE

It is only fair to say that Ibn Saud did not seek the war with the Imam of Yemen on whom he has imposed somewhat ignominious peace terms. The frontiers between Yemen and Ibn's domains have never been clearly defined, and there was one district over which the Wahabists did not admit of any dispute. The aged Imam defiantly occupied with his troops this oasis, at Najran, and Ibn Saud was provoked into war. The Imam might have put up a better fight, but revolution broke out among his troops and people, and the defence collapsed. The peace conditions imposed mean that the King of the Hedjaz will now be in a position to exercise complete control over the trade of Yemen, the port of Hodeida having been occupied.

GENEROSITY THE BEST POLICY

Great interest attaches to the meeting of the Governing Body which is undertaking the organisation of relief for the Jewish and other refugees from Germany. This body was set up last September, at the Assembly of the League of Nations, although to meet Germany's susceptibilities it was made a part of the League's ordinary refugee organisation. It is, however, acting in close co-operation with the "Nansen Office". The High Commissioner, Mr. McDonald, has been busy during the past weeks. He has been in Berlin arranging questions relating to passports and property. He has also been in the United States continuing his efforts for a united appeal on a large scale for the necessary funds. Meanwhile, he has been arranging openings for professional workers in overseas countries; many of the States of South America and Asia can do well enough with the services of the doctors and similar specialists whom Germany has preferred to do without.

HISTORY'S PROOF

The Governing Body of the Refugee Office consists of representatives of the State chiefly interested in the problem, that is to say the State bordering on Germany which received the largest number of refugees, and some of the overseas States, such as the United States, in which, it is hoped, some of the refugees will finally find their home. All action which the High Commissioner may take is, of course, finally dependent on the consent of the Governments concerned, so that it is necessary they should meet periodically to indicate their attitude towards measures he may propose. The actual task of tiding the refugees over the most difficult period and of fitting them again into the framework of society must, however, depend not on Governments but on the goodwill of individuals. Today, when every profession seems over-crowded, no one wants a newly arrived competitor. Yet history proves abundantly that every country which has expelled refugees, whether it has been Spain with her Jews or France with her Huguenots, has impoverished herself thereby and every country which offered them hospitality has done a service, not only to them, but to itself.

MR. PEPYS IN HONGKONG

May 25th.—Rose early this morning and looked over and corrected the entries in my diary, which I had jotted down somewhat in haste overnight. To my office later, where very busy, and so back to the Club, after the preview of a picture, which I did not approve. There, a glass or two of wine, and dinner being taken, playing at Contrakt, at which I do lose and win a rubber but I do believe that I was the better off by a few florins, at which I was pleased. And so to bed.

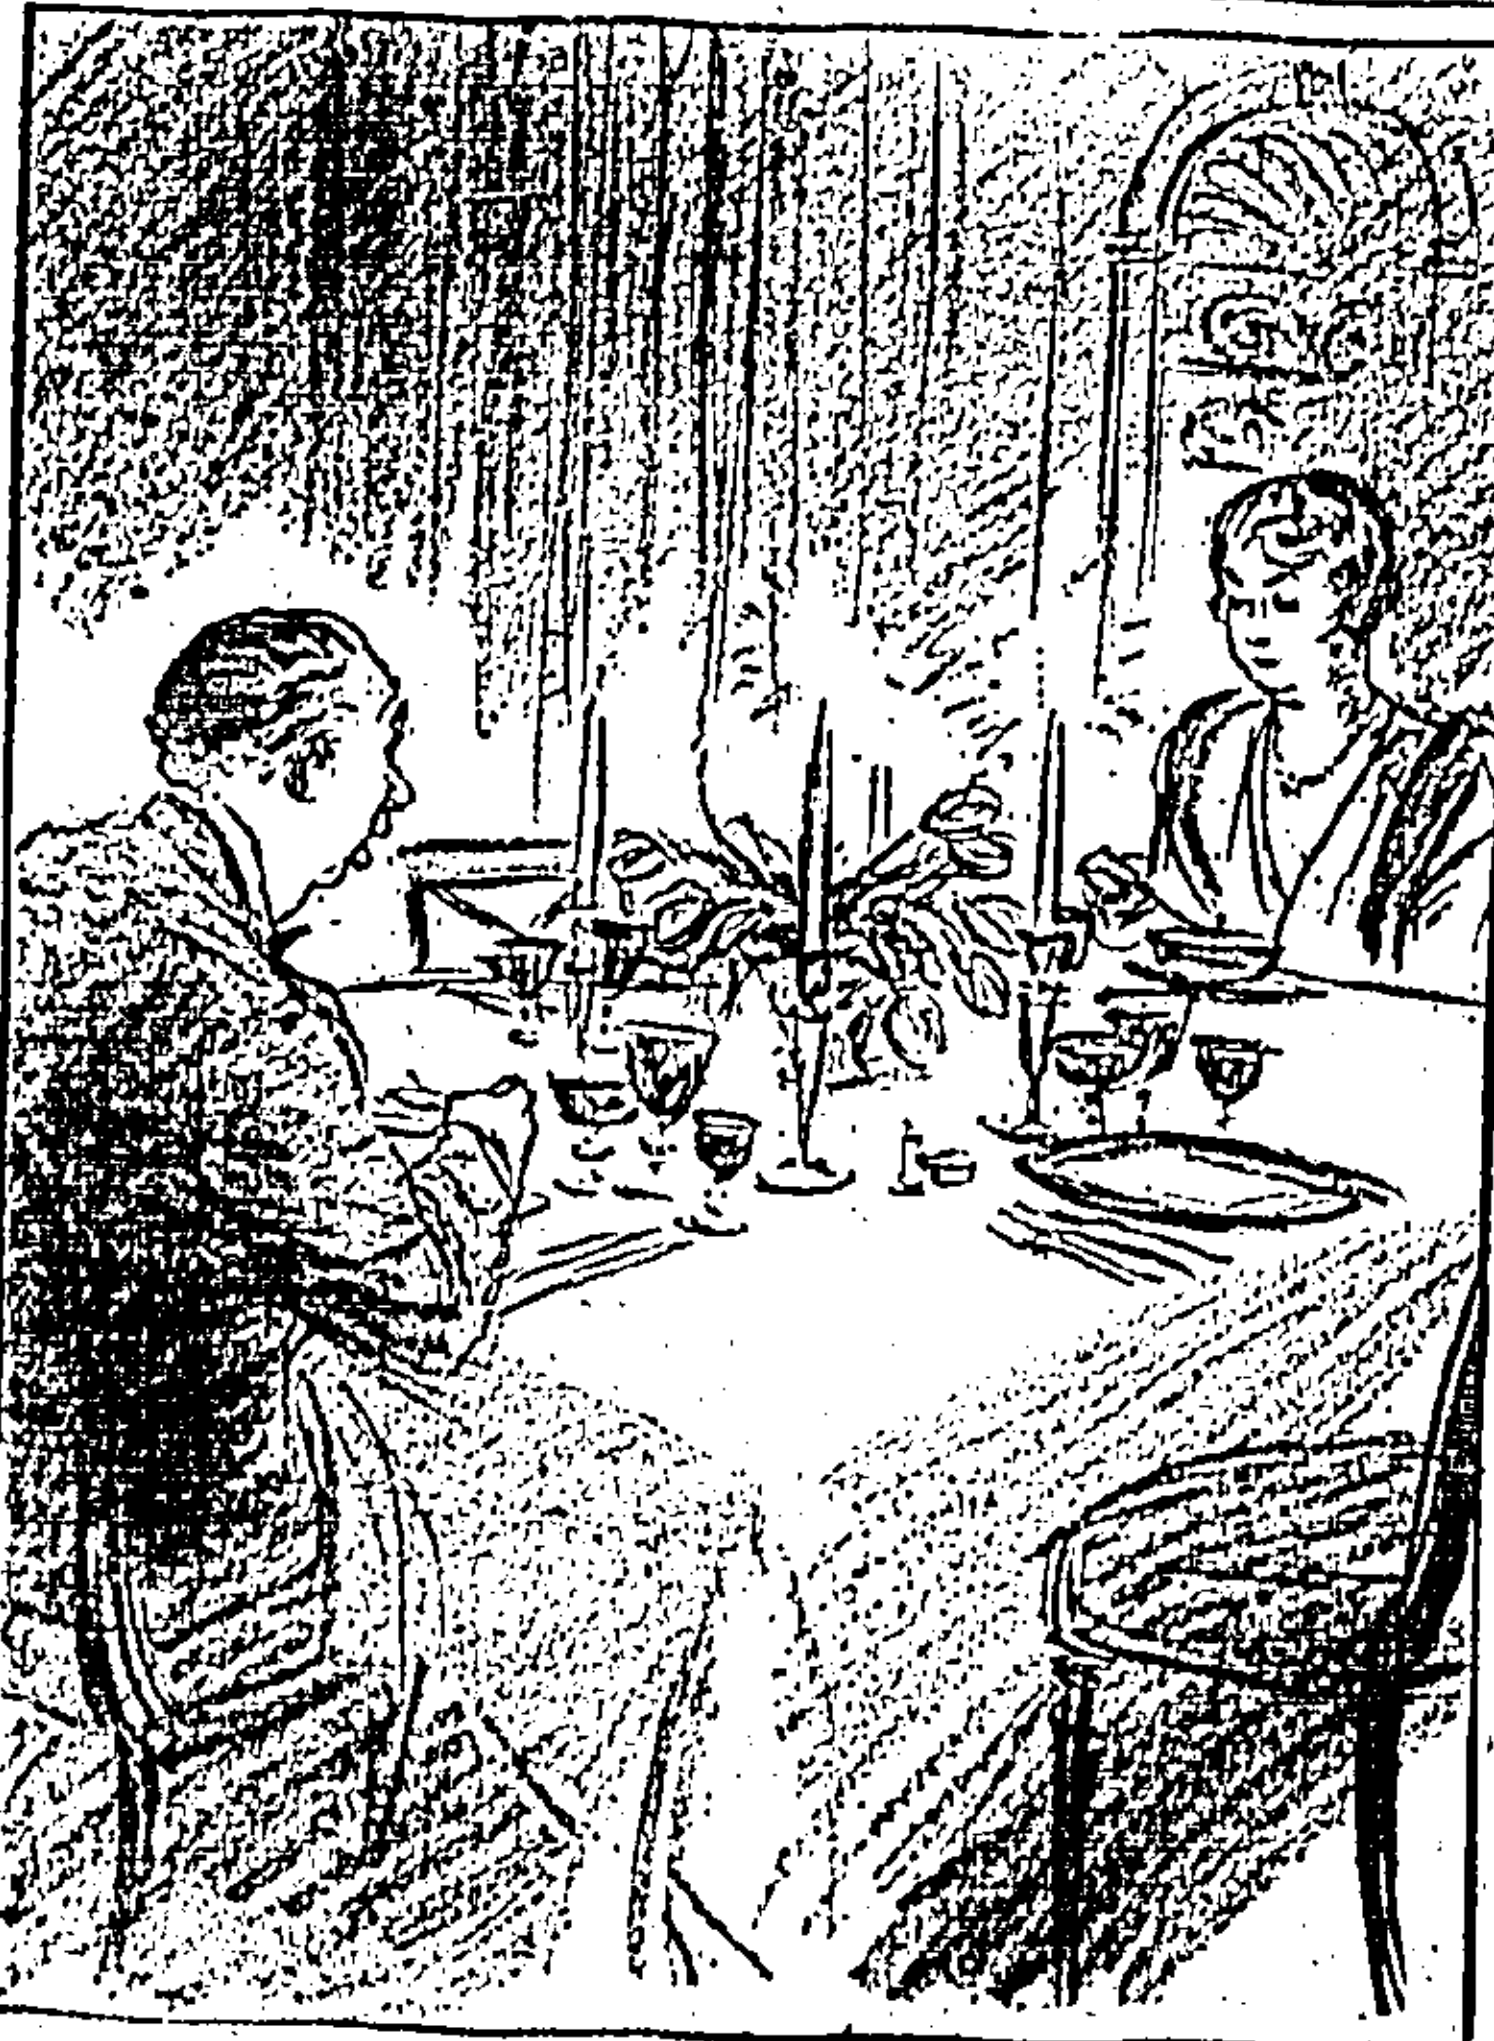

26th.—Up very betimes, and to my office where I had been minded to despatch my business early, and then to drink a glass of wine upon one of the King's small ships. But Lord! I am so thronged by business that I do fall of my aim, and so to the Club, where I fall into talk with Mr. Rush about a bowls match in which I am to play. And he says that we shall play at the Valley, where I do find him to be right, as the Bowling Green do have the better of us by five shots, and indeed are the better men upon two rinks of three. After the game, all very merry and much good fellowship, and I do find that at this new game, (at which, indeed I am sadly to seek) I do meet many pleasant fellows and I take great pleasure in it. But whether I shall preserve my place or no I am in doubt. Later to the Club, where I dine very pleasantly, and read after in my chamber a pleasant book of Mr. J. Buchan, which I have not scanned these two years. And I am of opinion that there is the greatest possible pleasure in reading again old favourites, and do make a note that I must soon take up Handley Cross again, and some others of Mr. R. Surtees, his tales.

27th.—Lord's Day.—Lay late, as I did prearrange to note that it was Trinity Sunday. And I am sorry for it. After trimming myself I do fall to writing in my chamber, and later to the Barre, where come Mr. Povey and others, with Creed. There I learn that Mistress W. Moody plays not in the tennis at Wimbledon this year. And I am sorry for it, yet would I fain know if her Lord is of the same mind, as I do conceive nothing more irksome than to be an appendage of one of these famous females. From the States of Amerique comes news of more strikes and riots, and Mr. Povey tells me that he hears that, if the trouble doth continue, Mr. Roosevelt will name Mr. Dilmer as sheriff to set these Reds in their places. Some talk of War Dohs, and we all laugh very merrily when Creed doth call to mind that, in the mid-sixties, Amerique did default to British bond-holders for some ninety and five million—worth double. But a short memory is a blessed thing. Mr. Povey speaks of the Passion Play at Oberammergau, and tells us some horrid tale that some parties did attempt to purchase the film rights. But I cannot believe that any one would be so sordid. Some talk also of Nazi reforms, of a Nordic Christ, and a Jewish Jesus, but I deem it too horrid to be true, and so back to a bath and dinner, and so, after reading for a space, to bed.

28th.—Reading this day in the news-sheets, I am somewhat at a stand to find a story that Mr. D. Jardine shall be paid to report the Test Matches at Krickett for a fee of some £5,000. But this I can hardly credit, as he has already sent a most opionastre electric telegram to the news sheets, that he neither can nor wishes to play Krickett against the Australians. And herein I do think he was wrong, but the provocation was intense. And for it he hath been blamed by Mr. P. Warner but recently in the first number of the Cricketer, yet Plum, doth forget that it was a Harlequin cap, when worn by him, that did first rouse the ire of the Australian crowd; and that the obloquy for Mr. Jardine was—at first—but inherited. Now, as to his telegram, I am in doubt, this way or that, as to whether it was expedient. But, having shaken off the dust of his feet, as it were, against them, I doth seem to me the naughtiest thing in the world that Mr. D. should proceed to make money from the Tests. And so, as I do say, I believe it not without further witness. Comes also a report that Larwood will refuse to play in the Tests, he having been offered £2,000 to report the games; which to my mind is as silly a lie as possible, for the man would thereby damn himself to all eternity, against which the interest upon £2,000 doth seem to me somewhat inadequate. A busy day at the office, and later I dine with Mr. Stephen and his pretty Lady, and won a rubber or so at Contrakt. Walked home, and so to bed.

29th.—This day, I did fall asleep at once, after drinking my morning tea, and later am awakened by gun-fire at about eight of the clock. And this I do presently discover to be saluting, and so it doth go on, disturbing me time and again when I do seek to order my papers at my office. And at the end, I am tempted to wonder if any man be worth this deplorable waste of powder. And then I do meditate as to how many poor people this morning's expenditure would have kept in food for months. Moreover it comes into my mind that this barbaric relic of the prehistoric ages should be done away with, and instead a flag dipped so many times in salute, thus saving the Exchequer of the price of the powder, and the ear-drums of his Majesty's lieges from the reverberations. Before I take my luncheon, I do find a minute's leisure to scan the news-sheets, and I find that Mr. J. Hobbs doth lack but three centuries... of his two hundred, and it is my earnest hope that he doth fulfil them this year. I learn here that the Gold Bar Exchanges do close down of their own volition, upon which I do congratulate them most heartily. And now I do judge that it would not be amiss to cut down the numbers of other brokers, and I have conceived a scheme whereby this might well be done. For, if I had my way, I would suffer no man to operate save that he did give security in a handsome sum for the stability of his operations, and did upon his profits pay a nominal percentage as tax. But this tax they should only pay if their gettings amount to so much that they could fairly afford to pay it. So that I would hold him free who did make but a thousand a month; while he, who doth make profit of fifteen hundred a month should pay at one per centum, and so upon a rising scale. And all this should be reckoned upon a twelve-month, and paid in arrears. For upon this scale, it doth seem to me that the sound Brokers would profit, while our shares would be quoted at nearer their true value.

30th.—Very busy all day at my office, and later, writing in my (Continued on Page 4.)

"This is the fourth time they have held us up. Why do you keep on asking them?"

STRANGE STORIES OF MODERN SPY TRIALS

METROPOLITAN-VICKERS CASE: THORNTON'S CONFESSION

BY MILTON BRONNER

A mysterious menace had hung for days over the household of Allan Monkhouse, director of the British Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company in Russia. The native servants realized it, whether their employer did or not.

First of all, the Russian housekeeper had strangely disappeared without warning. Moreover, she had not come back. Followed by unexplainable nocturnal rustlings and rappings in the house at Plovko, not far from Moscow, strangers lurking about, asking odd questions.

Finally, as Monkhouse and three friends sat one evening last March over their coffee and liqueurs, twenty representatives of the OGPU, dressed in Russian police uniforms with search warrants, pushing past the terrified servants, the officers entered the house, bureau, closets and desks, ending by ripping open all the mattresses in an eager search for documents which apparently they did not find.

GREAT CONSEQUENCES.

However, that was only the first round. Next came the arrest of six members of the Metropolitan-Vickers staff, including Director Monkhouse. The others were Leslie Charles Thornton, John Cushty, Charles Nordwall, William Gregory and William Lionel MacDonald. All were taken to Lubianka Prison and varied charges which included sabotage, the giving of bribes, and military and economic espionage were lodged against them.

That was the beginning of an alleged spy case that at one time threatened to wreck forever the trade and diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Russia and to affect unfavourably Russia's standing with other nations, notably the United States.

When news of the arrests reached England, the country instantly went wild with indignation. The London press waited to hear none of the details. Streamers and banner-lines immediately proclaimed that the Britishers were innocent, that they had been outrageously framed by the Soviets.

The British Foreign Office spoke sternly to the Soviet ambassador. The House of Commons gave over the regular business of the day to allow impassioned denunciations of "unjustified charges." The English ambassador to Russia was summoned home for a conference. RUSSIANS ARRESTED.

Meantime in Russia, the Englishmen were questioned intensively for many hours and all except MacDonald were released on bail. Such was the international commotion at this time, that many doubted the case would ever come to trial. However, the OGPU had gone too far in their zeal to allow of a graceful withdrawal, for they had arrested twelve Russians, one woman and eleven men, in connection with the case and charged them also with sabotage and with taking bribes. The woman had served as secretary to the Metropolitan-Vickers company, the men had been employed as workers.

What made the outlook especially far from cheery was that only a short time before, a number of Russians convicted of sabotage had been shot. All added complication was that one of the Britons was being held without bail. An uneasy conviction began to grow up in England that there was something else behind the stated charges, that the OGPU had been searching for documents of greater consequence than had been admitted.

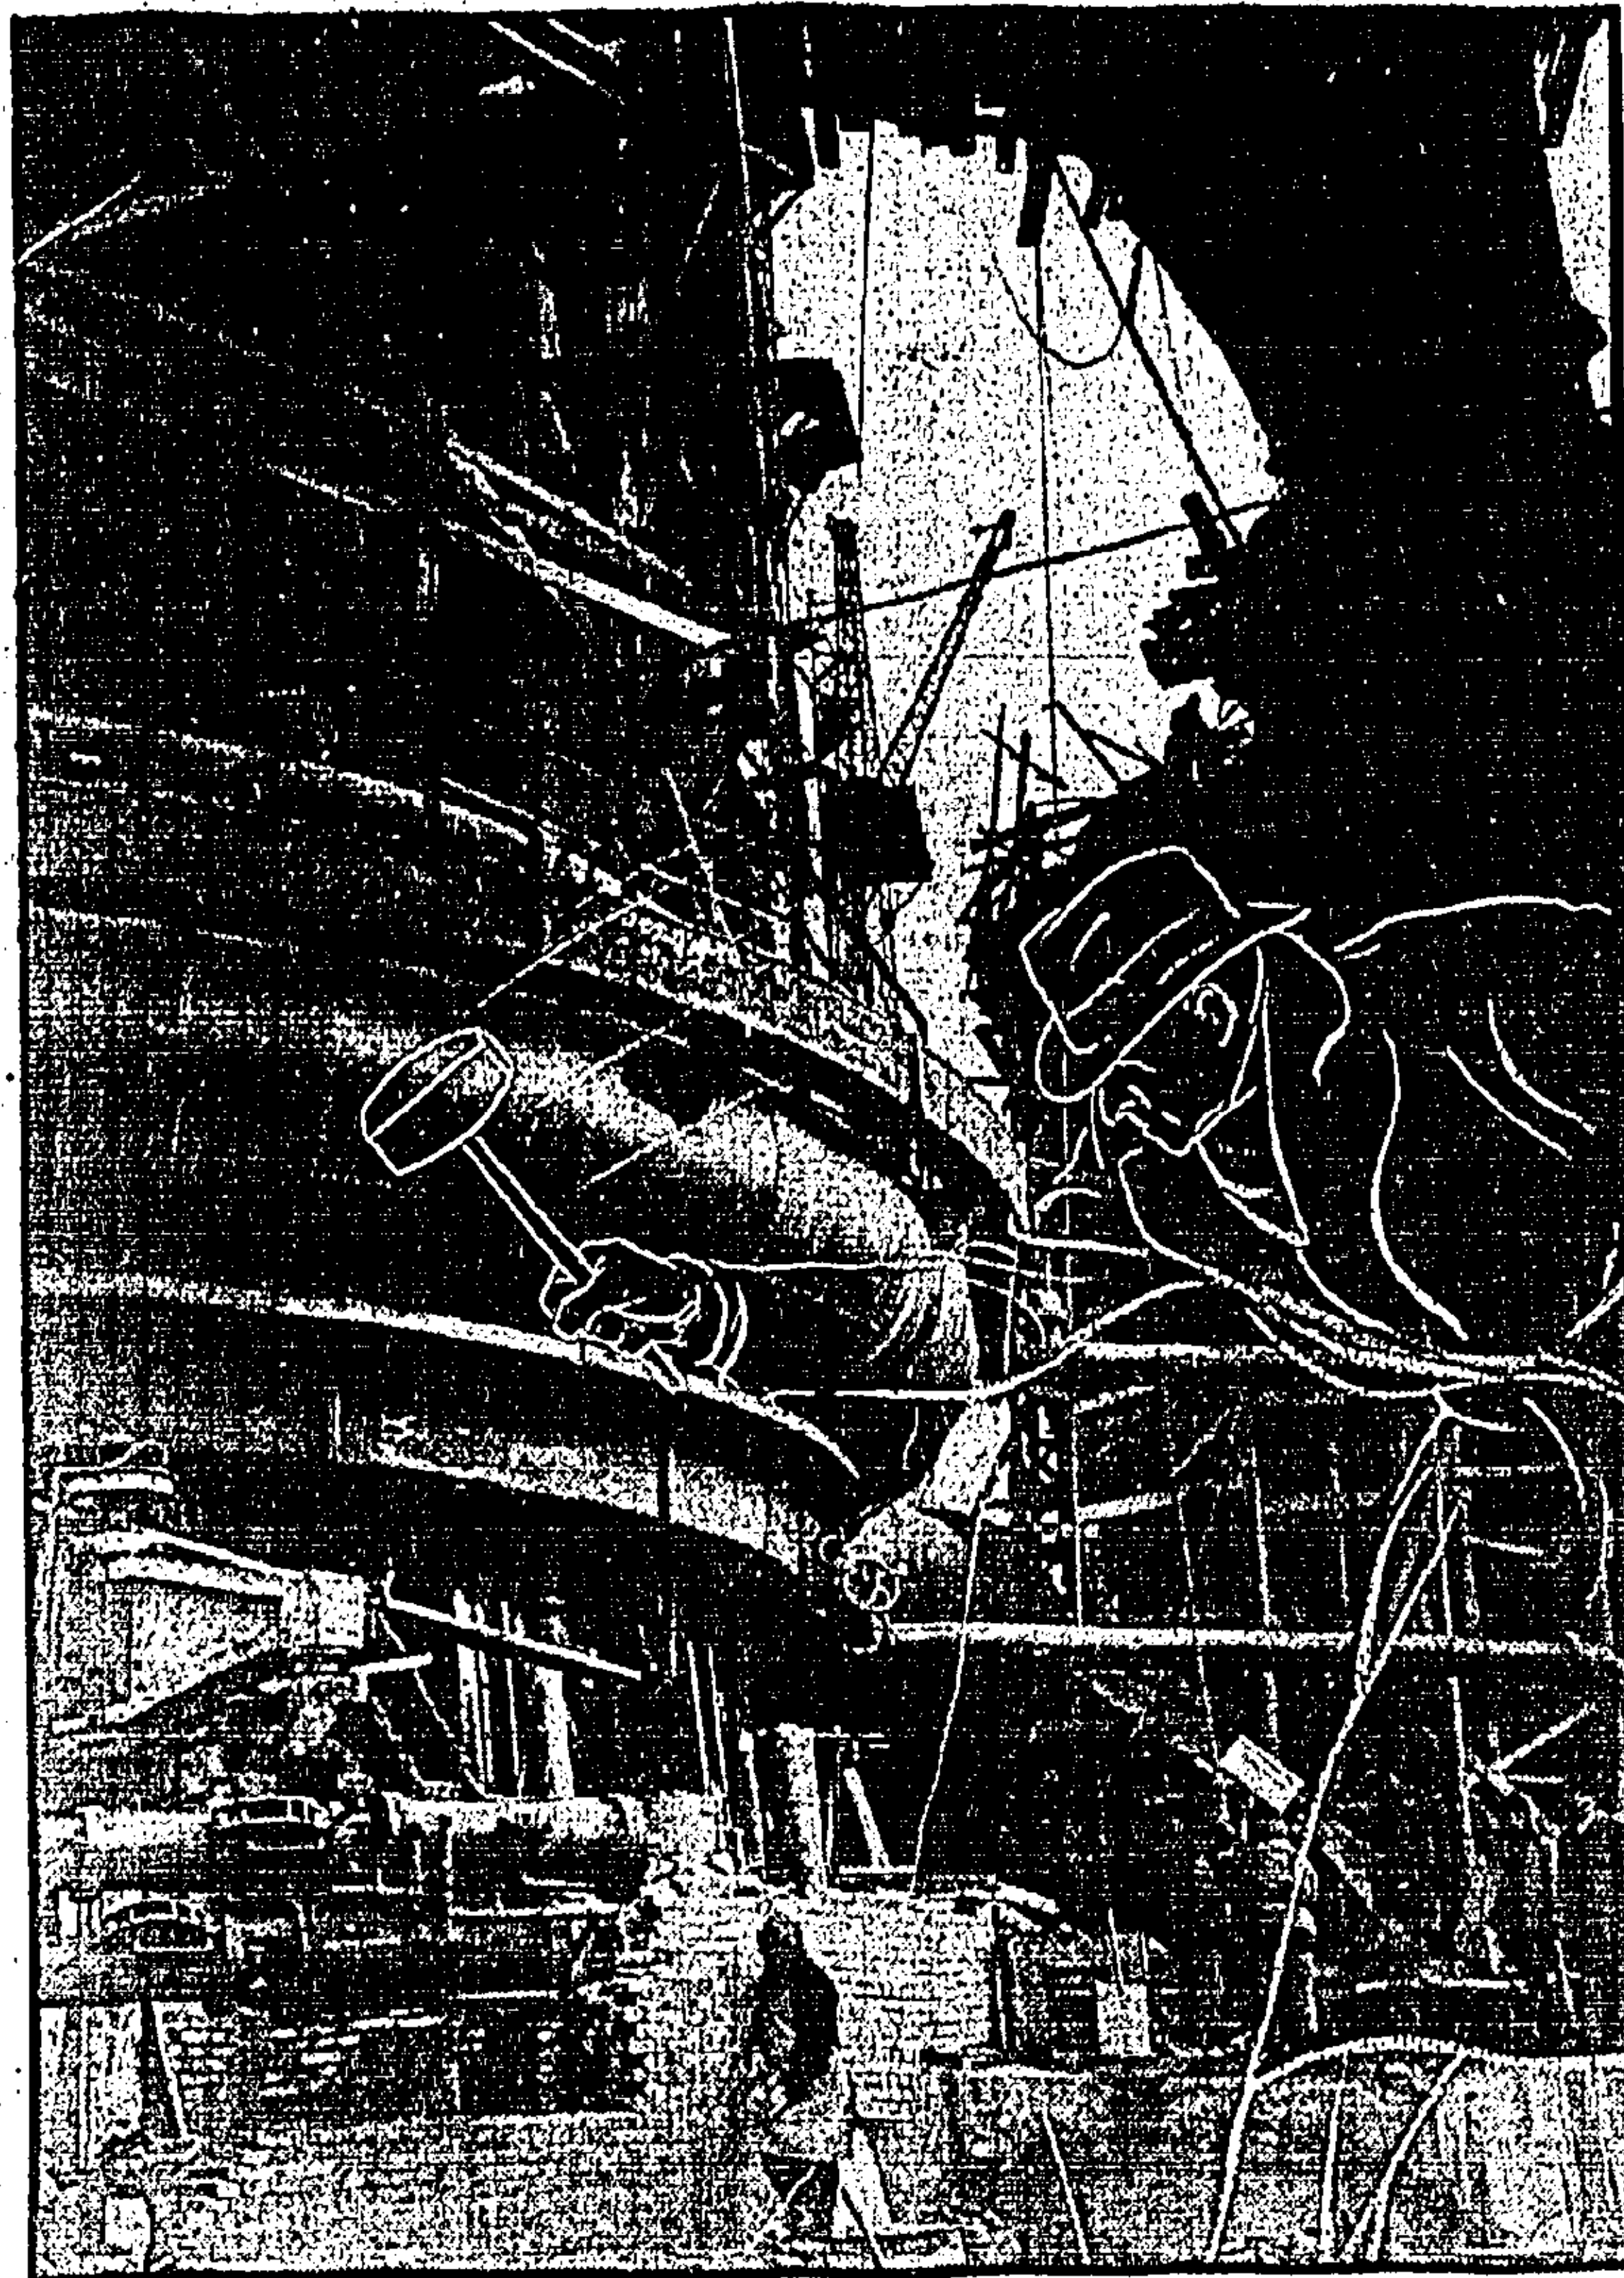

SABOTAGE CHARGED.

Even at that, the indictment was long and detailed enough. It alleged that recurrent breakdowns in many of the big electrical power stations at Moscow, Zlatoust, Zuevka and other places had been the result of planned wrecking activities, designed to put the power stations and the state factories dependent upon them out of business. And it accused the staff of the Metropolitan-Vickers company of having planned and carried forward these activities.

The indictment also asserted that the company, through its employees, had gathered secret information to the detriment of the state and had bribed corrupted Russians to gather such information. All this, of course, was classed as counter-revolutionary behaviour and therefore a serious offence against the Soviets.

DRAMATIC COURT SCENE.

Came the trial on April 12, 1933. October Hall in Moscow, now a courtroom, was once a ballroom where gallant nobles and ladies in tiaras and low-cut gowns danced and flirted together. For this occasion it was filled with labourers in working clothes standing or sitting on rude wooden forms, their hob-nailed boots scraping the once satin-smooth dance floors. Two of the OGPU in uniform with rifles and fixed bayonets guarded the prisoners in the dock. Judge Vassili Ulrich, in a business suit, presided over the judges' rostrum, covered with red felt. The fiery Professor Vishinsky, chief orator of a Russia that does not lack orators, was prosecuting. Each defendant had both a Russian and an English lawyer to defend him.

In addition, it was understood that according to Soviet custom, he would have a chance to plead his own case in court.

It had been assumed, at least in England, that all six defendants would plead not guilty. MacDonald, who was crippled, limped to the fore, bowed his head and pleaded guilty. The twelve Russians followed suit. The other five Englishmen pleaded not guilty. Each of them except Gregory at one time or another in the trial was confronted with Russians who claimed either to have taken bribes from him for furnishing information or to have performed wrecking operations at his direction.

CONFESSION REPUDIATED.

Thornton, who was supposed to have signed a confession of guilt before the trial, now repudiated his deposition. He claimed he had been excited when he signed it. He did admit, though, that he had obtained information about the equipment of various electrical plants in Russia, about the living conditions of the people and so on but said it was only for the use of his company. He also denied that he had given money as a bribe, asserting that he had sometimes loaned it.

Yet the court had, in what he admitted was his own writing, a document which read in part: "All our spying operations on U. S. R. R. territory are directed by the British Intelligence Service, through their agent C. S. Richards, who occupies the position of managing director of the Metropolitan Vickers Electrical Export Company Limited."

This statement was followed by a list of names of those who were alleged to have acted as spies. Thornton, denying all, especially the accusation that he had destroyed anything, cried in a loud voice:

"All my life I have been making things. I never destroyed any!"

BRITONS DENOUNCED.

Monkhouse, thin-faced, with tired gray eyes, declared that he, too, had from time to time picked up information pertinent to his business interests which he had passed on to London headquarters, but he insisted that this sort of news gathering was legitimate and practiced by all commercial concerns.

Gregory was even more emphatic than Thornton about his own constructive tendencies. He said he had personally installed every part of one special job, working day and night, and had established a record by finishing three huge switches in forty-eight days.

The issue finally seemed to boil itself down to a question of whether information-gathering for the uses of business constitutes spying.

Vishinsky evidently thought it did. Summing up, in a speech that lasted for hours, he asked death for the Russians and asserted the Britons deserved death but would probably be shown mercy by a Russian court, because they were of another land. He addressed Thornton with especial bitterness, telling him that his only use in Russia now "would be to manure the soil of our Soviet fields."

THE RESULT.

The judges, after a prolonged session with the documents behind locked doors, sentenced the twelve Russians to prison for terms of from one to ten years, ordered Monkhouse, Nordwall and Cushty deported from Russia, acquitted Gregory, whose self-avowed zeal for machinery had seemingly impressed them, sentenced Thornton to prison for three years and MacDonald for two.

As soon as the verdict was announced, the British Government instituted an embargo on eighty per cent of Russian goods allowed into the country. Russia countered with a similar embargo. A few months later, a conference between M. Litvinoff, Russian Commissar for Foreign Affairs, and Sir John Simon, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, resulted in a compromise agreement. By its terms, MacDonald and Thornton were freed on July 1, and England raised its embargo on Russian goods.

Stylish Clothes for the Mature Woman

New tunics, two-piece dresses and suits make it easy for middle age to find a chic wardrobe

by Julia

Costumes Courtesy ~ ~ ~ of JOHN WANAMAKER.

HERE'S a brown and white printed chiffon afternoon dress with matching, three-quarter jacket and a rippling jabot that is slenderizing. The shoes are step-in pumps of brown kid.

ORCHIDS on a white crepe background make a charming printed pattern for this sophisticated evening gown. The matching jacket transforms it into a dinner frock. White kid sandals with interesting perforations are worn with it.

THIS navy blue silk crepe suit with a navy and white printed blouse makes a flattering costume for the mature figure. The hat is a blue straw sailor and the T-strap sandals are blue with white underlay.

AT LEFT is a two-piece dress in dark brown sheer with interesting white pique collar, revers and cuffs. The blouse is scalloped around the bottom and is belted at the waistline. The shoes are brown kid with a tiny silk kid trimming.

AT RIGHT is the popular redingote in a matron's size. The dress is a black and white print and the long, silk coat with raglan sleeves is black. A wide-brimmed straw hat, medium-heeled dress oxfords and white gammet gloves are the correct accessories.

MATURE figures take no back seats for the size sixteens in this season's fashion race. Just because a lady has graduated from the misses' department and gone on to women's sizes, there's no reason for her to be glum about it. Not this year anyway.

Frankly, it's pretty hard to tell which is more attractive—clothes for the very young or modes for mature figures. One outstanding difference is that smart costumes in the last category never can be termed "cute." But who wants to be cute, anyway, when there are beautiful tunics, silk suits with flattering blouses and dignified redingotes that certainly give a mature figure an air of suave sophistication?

Let's look at the two-piece dresses that are perfect for town in hot weather. As for tunics, mature figures bow low to these. And why not? Nothing is more slenderizing.

The redingotes, of course, are youthfulness and sophistication personified. Try one with a black and white or navy and white printed dress and a long, silk coat that matches the background of the frock.

For afternoon, printed silk suits are good. Many have short sleeved frocks topped by charming jackets and others are made with separate skirts and jackets. If you select the latter, you'll have a chance to indulge your truly feminine weakness for attractive, gaily-coloured blouses.

Navy blue, black and brown are the leading colours for matrons' dresses. And, dressed up with white or pastel lingerie touches, they're charming.

And now we come to evening gowns. If you want to be very practical, get an evening dress with a matching jacket that transforms the gown into a dinner frock. White is the favourite summer evening colour—prints are next in the style race.

Accessories to wear with the new summer crop of matrons' clothes are as fascinating as the costumes themselves. Hats with brims are in the fore, and that's certainly good news. And the summer shoes combine smartness with comfort which is extra good news.

No use getting shoes that aren't comfortable merely because you happen to like the way they're cut. Look at arch preserver types. These products of an inventive modern age are as easy to wear as your old bedroom slippers and so smart that your daughter will be begging for some too.

As a matter of fact, it might not be a bad idea to get a pair for her. They ward off all sorts of aches and pains and offer perfect support for weak arches.

AN EVEN GAME

Hollands' Rink Beat
Phillips'

An even game on the Craigengower C. C. green yesterday resulted in a victory for E. G. Post, T. H. W. Haynes, J. J. Gregory and W. E. Hollands over T. Ferguson, W. Hyde, E. C. Fincher and R. P. Phillips in the Open Rinks Championship by 19 shots to 13.

There was nothing to choose between the two rinks for the first 12 heads, scoring being confined to one and two shots. Two fours for Hollands' rink turned the scale in their favour, and added to this, Phillips' rink remained stuck at 11 for five heads.

Playing only one head to decide the right to enter the second round, W. McHardy and W. Forrest (Police) beat A. M. Omar and K. M. Omar (I. R. C.) by three shots on the Hongkong Football Club green. The game was abandoned at 23-23 after the 21st head at their first meeting.

The following names have been added to the list of medical practitioners.—Dr. Alberto Marie Rodriguez, Dr. Wong Shing-hang, and Dr. Lew Khoo-shin. All are Bachelors of Medicine and Surgery of the University of Hongkong.

Mr. M. K. Lo gave a most interesting talk on "Medicine and Law" to members of the Chinese Medical Association at the Chinese Merchants' Club last night. Dr. S. W. Phoon was in the chair.

Mr. Carlos Henrique Basto, Honorary Consul for Bolivia in Hongkong, resumed charge of the Bolivian Consulate, on 28th May.

A talk is to be given to the Rotary Club by Mr. R. P. Dunlop, B.Sc., M.I.E.E., on Tuesday next, entitled "Aids to the Senses."

would discuss the situation on Monday.

He viewed it, he said, that the gravest since the beginning of the Conference.

Speaking amid tense silence from the assembled delegates, Mr. Henderson stated that he took a very serious view of the developments in the past week. "I have given the position very careful attention," he said, and added, speaking slowly and distinctly, "the situation is more extremely grave than at any previous time. Such a situation as that, in my opinion, cannot be solved merely by making speeches, which have revealed the widest divergence of opinion."

CANNOT MINUTISE CRISIS

"We cannot minimise the difficulties that confront us," he proposed, he went on, that they should take the week-end to reflect upon the position.

Mr. Henderson is hoping to get many foreign ministers, who have left, back to Geneva by Monday afternoon, a hope which is not shared by the majority of the delegates at the Conference.

The Polish foreign minister, Colonel Beck, indicated that Poland would oppose M. Litvinoff's scheme to transform the conference into a Permanent Security Conference.—United Press.

NEUTRALS' PROPOSAL

During the resumed debate in the General Commission of the Disarmament Conference, the Swedish—Foreign—Minister, Monsieur Sandler, introduced a joint declaration on behalf of the Danish, Spanish, Netherlands, Norwegian, Swedish and Swiss delegations, in which they recall the standpoint in their memorandum of April 15th regarding disarmament, security and equality.

The declaration suggested that in view of the vital importance of enforcing security, to an extent going beyond the stipulations indicated in the United Kingdom draft, modified by the British Government memorandum, a special Committee should be appointed to examine, without delay, the questions of the guarantee of execution of future conventions and report to the Bureau.

HARD HITTING FEATURES FIRST CLASS CRICKET

KENT, SUSSEX AND LEICESTER WIN HANDSOMELY

SIX MATCHES PRODUCE OVER 5,000 RUNS

London, June 1. England's "Brighter Cricket" movement, for which the popular writers and public have been making demands for the last five or six years, is beginning to make itself apparent. Enterprising batting and forcing tactics have been quite a feature of the season to date, and some of the best examples have been provided during the past three days.

Despite the fact that five county matches produced 4,145 runs, an average of 829 runs per match, and that together with the Australians' remarkable encounter at the Oval, first class cricket saw 4,415 runs scored in half a dozen matches, with an average of 902 runs per match, only one of the county ties failed to carry with it a decisive result.

Brilliant successes were recorded by Kent, Sussex and Leicestershire, while Warwick triumphed over Middlesex and Lancashire easily had the better of the game against Glamorgan. Kent refused to rest on their laurels after their epoch-making score of 803 for 4, and proceeded to beat Essex by an innings.

Essex responded nobly in their first visit to the wicket, and put together 408, but Freeman had a great spell in the follow-on, and taking 6 for 60, sent the Essex men back for 203.

Frank Woolley played a notable part in the compilation of Kent's score, contributing a characteristic 172.

SOMERSET TOYED WITH.

Sussex, present championship leaders, just toyed with Somerset to win by an innings and 51 runs. J. Parkes and A. Melville did most of the run-getting for the Sussex score of 463 for 5 declared. Parkes helped himself to 160 and Melville to 105. Somerset failed badly at the crease.

Warwickshire won smartly against Middlesex after obtaining a lead of 55 on the first innings. They batted more strongly in the second innings and with Parsons hitting up 101, managed to collect an aggregate of 281. Middlesex made but a poor effort to obtain the 338 to win, and were all out for 184.

Lancashire made themselves safe from defeat against Glamorgan by rattling up 514 for 7 declared. Tyldesley leading the way with 239, and being supported by Hopwood who collected 123.

GEARY'S BOWLING.

But Glamorgan after replying with 352, were never in real danger of defeat despite the fact that they followed on. They played out time, scoring 184 for 4. Dyson again batted well for the Welshmen, hitting up 191 not out. Leicestershire scored a smart win over Gloucester, and for it they owed much to Geary, who was in magnificent form with the ball, and in the course of two innings captured 10 for 81.

Gloucester were sent back a first time for 161. Geary's figures being 5 for 21. Leicestershire replied with 325, and then sent Gloucester back again for 293, Geary this time taking 5 for 60.

Set to score the modest total of 129 to win, Leicestershire obtained the runs at the cost of one wicket.

SWIMMING GALAS.

Y.M.C.A. Plans Formulated For June 16.

TO SUPPORT S. C. A.

A number of important decisions were taken at a committee meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Swimming Section held last night when arrangements were completed for the holding of a swimming gala on Saturday, June 16.

The programme will include the following events:

50 yards aggregate (men),
50 yards aggregate (ladies),
100 yards handicap (men).

Mixed relay race.

A feature of the evening will be the polo match between the Y.M.C.A. and the combined Chinese.

A dance to the music of Scott's Band has been arranged to wind up the programme.

The committee decided to enter competitors for events at the charity swimming gala to be held by the South China Athletic Club on June 9 and are co-operating with the Victoria Recreation Club to raise a team of European polo players to meet the S.C.A.'s team that day.

WORLD OLYMPICS NOT WORRYING ABOUT MANILA DISPUTE

INTERNATIONAL SPORTS BODY SHOWS NO INTEREST

JAPAN PREPARING FOR BERLIN

Manila, May 28.

Recent developments have indicated that world athletic circles in general are not disposed to bother themselves over the dispute in the Far East over the action of Japan and the Philippines, in dissolving the Far Eastern Athletic Association over the protest of China, member of the association since its inception.

Complications in world Olympic circles, as a result of Dr. C. T. Wang's statement that the matter would be referred to the International Olympic Committee for arbitration, appeared unlikely after a statement made by Count Henri de Baillet-Latour, head of the international sports-governing body.

Speaking to the United Press in Athens, Greece, Latour pointed out that the FEAA is entirely independent of the International Olympic Committee, hence that body has no jurisdiction over Oriental sports.

WILL NOT AFFECT BERLIN GAMES.

Latour indicated that the rumour raised in Manila over the dissolution of the FEAA would have no effect on the Xth Olympic Games to be held in Berlin, and that the programme governing there will be the same as that of the Xth Olympiad held in Los Angeles where all three disputing Far Eastern nations—the Philippines, China and Japan, were participating countries.

PALESTINE TO ENTER.

Palestine, however, Latour said, will join the list of nations to compete for athletic supremacy at Berlin in 1936, making a total of 40. Thus the battle which German athletic entities staged some time ago for non participation of Jews in the Olympiad, a step to which the United States strenuously objected, is to be concluded with the irony of having the Jewish nation represented in the anti-Semitic capital of the world.

Meanwhile, throughout the Far East, nations looked forward to extensive athletic campaigns to bring their athletes to the peak of their ability in time for the Xth Olympic Games.

100 JAPANESE TO BE IN OLYMPIAD.

It was announced from Tokyo that 100 of Japan's best will make the trip to Berlin, and probably many more.

At the same time athletic entities in Japan announced that it is their intention to import track, field and swimming stars in the near future, from the United States and elsewhere, for the purpose of bringing their athletes into competition with the best in the world in order that they might profit from the experience.

On the part of China, athletic authorities have announced that East, nations looked forward to extensive athletic campaigns to bring their athletes to the peak of their ability in time for the Xth Olympic Games.

The closing stages of the game saw some gloriously free hitting. The Australians carried their total along to 629. McCabe scoring 240 in 375 minutes. His best hits were 29 fours.

Young Bromley had a six and seven boundaries in his 57, while Gower returned the best bowling figures of 5 for 147.

Surrey played out time in carefree style, hitting up 162 for 2. Gregory repeated some of first innings success by compiling 59 not out, but it was F. R. Brown who provided the fireworks.

Reaching 50 in 35 minutes he had the pleasure of carrying his bat for an attractively played 54.

EASY WINS FOR RECREIO AND SOUTH CHINA

YESTERDAY'S FULL PROGRAMME

A full programme of matches in the "C" Division of the tennis league yesterday saw the C.C.C., Craigengower and Club de Recreio retain their unbeaten records.

The I.R.C., K.C.C., K.B.G.C., and Kowloon Docks lost their first points of the season. The K.C.C. were no match for South China, even on their own courts, and the Recreio also gained a handsome win.

The Central British Association did well to beat the Kowloon Bowling Green, while the Civil Service defeat of the Police was no mean achievement.

In the "A" Division, South China and Craigengower played off their postponed tie, the Happy Valley outfit doing well to take the King's Park team to the old set before being beaten. Leonard and Hachuma played very well. Results, detailed scores and latest league table follow.

Baer-Carnera Encounter To Be Wild Fight

NEW YORK'S PLAYBOY BOXER NOW IN STRICT TRAINING

New York, June 1. A slashing, raging battle, the like of which hasn't been since Dempsey ended the come-back trail in his Chicago bout Gene Tunney is looked for by boxing men when Max Baer fights Primo Carnera at Madison Square Bowl, on Long Island, June 14.

The ponderous Primo, who stumbled into the championship and has held on to it by the simple process of being too large for any of his opponents to knock over, will meet his toughest foe when he goes up against Baer. Despite his playing around in New York's night clubs and the great fuss the women make over him, Baer is a slasher, a brawler and a very tough person in a ring. He has been training for some time for the battle and will continue. Happily, he is able to shelve his play boy tactics when the serious and arduous task of training comes to hand. He trained hard for Max Schmeling and is doing so for Carnera. The same goes for Primo. The Italian mountain of flesh is working hard. He can't box and he never learned to hit with force proportionate to his strength, and this winter, defeating aging Tommy Loughran in Florida, he looked pretty terrible. Being as large as he is, however, Carnera is a sizeable opponent and hard to get out of the way. Not only that but his manner of shoving an opponent instead of actually hitting him, seems, in most cases, to create enough damage.

Baer is the opposit. He tears into opponents with the fury of a tiger. He is not essentially a boxer but a slugger and a slasher. Baer's right hand does the most damage. It is constantly cocked and the Californian delivers quickly with it and usually with results, gratifying or not, according to the point of view.

Carnera is an Italian and the city's Little Italy will turn out in great numbers for the big fellow. Boxing in recent months has been climbing back into popular favour with Baer and his murderous sort of fighting has been in a large way responsible. The forthcoming fight, if it provides the fighting the experts believe it will, is expected to land the sport back in the popular spot it formerly occupied.—United Press.

POLO TOURNEY

HANDICAP COMPETITION AT CAUSEWAY

An interesting open handicap tournament is now in progress at the Hongkong Polo Club at Causeway Bay to decide the holders of the Navy Cup. The teams entered are given below with players' handicaps in brackets. Royal Artillery.—Black, Lieut. G. B. Portman (2), No. 3, Capt. P. V. Williams (3), No. 2, Lieut. W. J. Fennell (1), No. 1, Lieut. S. E. Skoy (0). Total handicap, six goals. South Wales Borderers.—Black, Lieut. D. P. Yates (3), No. 3, Capt. J. L. Jordan (4), No. 2, Lieut. A. J. Stocker (2) and No. 1, Capt. C. F. Blackden (2). Total handicap, eleven goals. Civilians.—Black, H. C. Macnamara (2), D. L. Newbiggin (3), No. 2, J. Keavick (3) and No. 1, Taylor (2). Total handicap, ten goals.

"Pro Bono Publico".—Black, Col. F. J. Neworthy (2), No. 3, Lieut. A. Wall (1), No. 2, Lieut. E. J. Skyrme (1). Total handicap, six goals.

In the first round the 24th Regiment (South Wales Borderers), conceding five goals to the Gunners beat them after a very fast game. The 24th were better mounted and combined well, keeping play in the gunners' half. The hard hitting of Capt. Williams for the losers was a notable feature of the game.

In the second round the Civilians beat the "Naughty Noughts" by thirteen goals to ten and thus entered the final. For the Civilians Keavick played a good game and scored the majority of their goals. For the losers Paterson put up a spirited defence.

In the same round the 24th, conceding five goals to "Pro Bono Publico" won the match fairly comfortably by 14 goals to six. Stocker scored the majority of the goals for the 24th and Jordan at No. 3 was outstanding. For the losers, Col. Neworthy played

MANUK LODGE.

MR. J. RUSSELL'S LECTURE AT THEOSOPHICAL MEETING

Mr. John Russell, Presidential Agent for China of the Theosophical Society, was the speaker at Thursday evening's meeting held by the Manuk Lodge. His subject was "The Known and the Unknown" and he began by saying that these two apparently contrasting ideas are but two aspects of life, each in turn coming uppermost in our struggle for a clearer understanding.

What do we know, out of all the great field of the Unknown? The early meetings of this Lodge were based on that question when Mr. Malcolm Manuk with a small following of enthusiasts founded and established the work here, the work of the exploration of the Unknown. A little more is taken from the Unknown, and added to the Known. But the great Unknown still remains to be explored, and our progress is constantly needed to lead further into its depths.

Such a scene as the moon rising over the waters of the ocean, the grandeur of illuminated space, gives us an idea of the vastness of the Unknown contrasted with the little that we know. And because of this vast Unknown creative works begin. Cathedrals and temples are built because God is unknown. The force of the Unknown stimulates creative power, and inspires such a genius as Milton to write a "Paradise Lost". It is not what we know that creates, but the learning of what is unknown.

We speculate on the Unknown, and set up for ourselves a standard which we may try to force on others, not realising that the value is not in the finished building but in the act of building.

The speaker went on to speak of the search for Truth, saying that by using the phrase, which may be called a poetical expression of an only partially realised idea behind our consciousness, we often appear wiser than we really are. We should stop and ask ourselves what it is we are searching for, what we stop to find. There are deep moments which come out of the Unknown, when we realise that we are treading on unfamiliar ground. These help us to understand that the real object of life is happiness, and when we try to visualize this inner happiness in terms of everyday life we may experience a glow rising from the heart to the lips, a glimmer of sunshine in unknown depths of the soul, awakening the spark latent there in us all.

Let us look at the smile of a child and realise the happiness it can bring to all who come in contact with it. Jesus said: "of such is the kingdom of heaven," and if we can but as little children allow the beatitudes of nature to penetrate to our hearts and glow in our eyes then life will be as beautiful as the moonlight rising over the water, making one feel inexpressibly that it is good to be alive. But of what use is this unless we can pass it on to others who have not yet achieved this realisation? Thus the power of the Unknown influences us all to go through life more happily in mutual service, it brings a ray of sunshine which we can reflect into the lives of others, for we are all parts of God's great Plan, fitting into the mosaic of his workmanship, and each has a tremendous part to play in this wonderful Universe of the Known and the Unknown.—Contributed.

A BROKEN DOWN SYSTEM.

This is a condition (or disease) to which many names are given but few really understand. It is simply weakness—a break down as it were, of the vital forces that sustain the system. No matter what may be its cause (they are almost numberless), its symptoms are much the same: the more prominent being sleeplessness, sense of prostration or weariness, depression of spirit and want of energy for all the ordinary affairs of life. Now, what alone is essential in all such cases is increased vitality—vigor, vital strength and energy to throw off these morbid feelings, and as night succeeds the day this may be more readily secured by a course of and new exultation imparted in place of that had so lately seemed worn-out, used up and valueless. This preparation is suitable for all ages, constitutions and conditions, to either sex, and it is difficult to imagine a disease or derangement whose main feature is weakness that will not be speedily and permanently overcome by this recuperative essence, which is destined to cast into oblivion everything that had preceded it for this wide-spread scourge of humanity.

MISS HELEN INGRAM.

DAUGHTER OF Y.M.C.A. SECRETARY DIES

The sympathy of a wide circle of friends will go out to Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Ingram in the sad loss they have sustained in the death of their young daughter, Helen Faith Pearce Ingram, who passed away at the Kowloon Hospital yesterday afternoon.

Miss Helen Ingram, who was within a month of celebrating her twelfth birthday, was stricken with meningitis exactly a week ago. She was taken to the Kowloon Hospital in a critical condition, and although she was reported during the week to be progressing as favourably as possible, her condition became worse, and she passed away yesterday.

She was a pupil at the Central British School and was very popular among her schoolmates. She took part in the pantomime, "Babes in the Wood" at the Y. M. C. A. during last Christmas. A member of the Kowloon Union Church Sunday School, and the Brownies, her passing will be deeply deplored.

The deepest sympathy will be extended to her father, who is Secretary of the European Young Men's Christian Association, and to her mother. More than usual pathos is added to her demise through the fact that her elder brother, Mr. Theo. Ingram, left Hongkong on home leave by the Carthage on April 21. Two sisters, Miss Ruth Ingram and Winifred Ingram are also left to mourn her death.

The funeral takes place this afternoon, passing the Happy Valley Monument at 4.30 p.m.

Mr. P. J. E. Illiaquer, a profound impression was created amongst the local French community yesterday by the death from meningitis of Monsieur P. J. E. Illiaquer at the Canossian Hospital.

The deceased who was 43 years of age, arrived in Hongkong from Saigon at the beginning of this year, to take up his duties as local representative of the firm of Hardvillers, Olivier & Co., machinery and hardware merchants, with an office in Asia Life Building.

He fell a victim to meningitis a fortnight ago, and was admitted to the Canossian Hospital, where he passed away yesterday afternoon.

He is survived by the widow, to whom the condolence of their many friends is extended.

The funeral takes place at the Catholic Cemetery at noon to-day.

London, June 1.
The Rev. W. W. Clayton, for twenty years a teacher with the London Missionary Society who served faithfully at the Canton Union Theological College and who was invalided home only a few weeks ago, died on May 29. His funeral will be held to-morrow.—Reuter.

Thousands have enlarged pores and do not know it. Every enlarged pore is due to irritation. Unless you get rid of skin pore irritation, foreign matter collects, and the consequence is unsightly blackheads, pimples, blotches, yellow darkened colour and coarse rough skin.

NEW SKIN IN 3 DAYS
Crème Tokalon Skin-food, White Colour (non-greasy), now contains a marvellous new soft, creamy wax, extracted from flowers, combined with predigested dairy cream and olive oil. It is tonic, astringent and nourishing—penetrates instantly, soothes irritated skin glands, tightens enlarged pores, dissolves blackheads so that they fall away, whitens and softens darkest, roughest skin. Keeps the skin fresh and delicately moist but not greasy. Equally adapted to take off the shine from an oily skin or sleek shiny nose.

Crème Tokalon Skin-food (White Colour) gives indescribable new skin beauty and freshness in 3 days—such as can be obtained in no other way. It should be used every morning. Many an attractive proposal of marriage has been inspired by a lovely soft white skin and beautiful complexion.

GOOD NEWS FOR THOSE WHO FEAR 'FLU'

'ASPRO'

WILL HUNT
OUT THE

'FLU'

IN 24 HOURS

HERE'S good news for those who fear the 'Flu. You can prevent colds, influenza and rheumatism—by taking 'ASPRO'. There has been so much evidence and proof from thousands of users all over the world as to the quick action, efficacy and safety of 'ASPRO' with these complaints, that we suggest you at least give it a trial. 'ASPRO' has a great variety of uses on account of its qualities as an Anti-Pyretic, Internal Antiseptic, Anti-Periodic, Anti-Fermentative and a solvent of Uric Acid. 'ASPRO' will not fail you—it is an all-British product—and on account of its numerous uses it is invaluable to have 'ASPRO' in your home ready for any emergency.

WHY 'ASPRO' DOES

NOT HARM THE HEART

Science Protects You

Against Dangerous

Drugs and Narcotics

In appearance 'ASPRO' is merely a white tablet, yet how few realise the scientific investigations—the laboratory experimental work involved by analysis and chemists to produce 'ASPRO' free from the development of hydrolysis and Free Salicylic Acid which is so harmful to the human system. Don't meddle with dangerous drugs. You take no chances when you use 'ASPRO'. 'ASPRO' is the safe, sure, certain tablet. It does not harm the heart or cause stomach troubles. Furthermore it does not produce any injurious after-effects. 'ASPRO' relieves a headache in from 5 to 10 minutes. It stops colds and 'Flu' at inception and relieves rheumatism in one night, if taken according to the directions. It brings sweet sleep to the sleepless. It removes the cause of numerous complaints, because, after ingestion in the system, it is anti-fermentative—anti-periodic—an antiseptic—powerful germicide and a solvent of uric acid. 'ASPRO' is packed in 3 sizes, 50, 100, and 250.

'Try ASPRO' for

Headache
Rheumatism
Neuritis
Sleeplessness
Toothache
Earache
Neuralgia
Colds
Influenza
Feverishness

Temperature
Malaria
Dengue
Sciatica
Gout
Lumbago
Sore Throat
Asthma
Hay Fever
Irritability
Periodical Pains Peculiar to Women.
Alcoholic After-Effects.

'ASPRO' has fulfilled a world demand for a QUICK ACTION MEDICINE. A PAIN RELIEVING MEDICINE that does not harm the heart—that does not create a craving and is not habit forming. A medicine that can be taken by all the family with absolute safety and efficacy.

HOW TO TAKE 'ASPRO'
FOR COLDS & FLU.

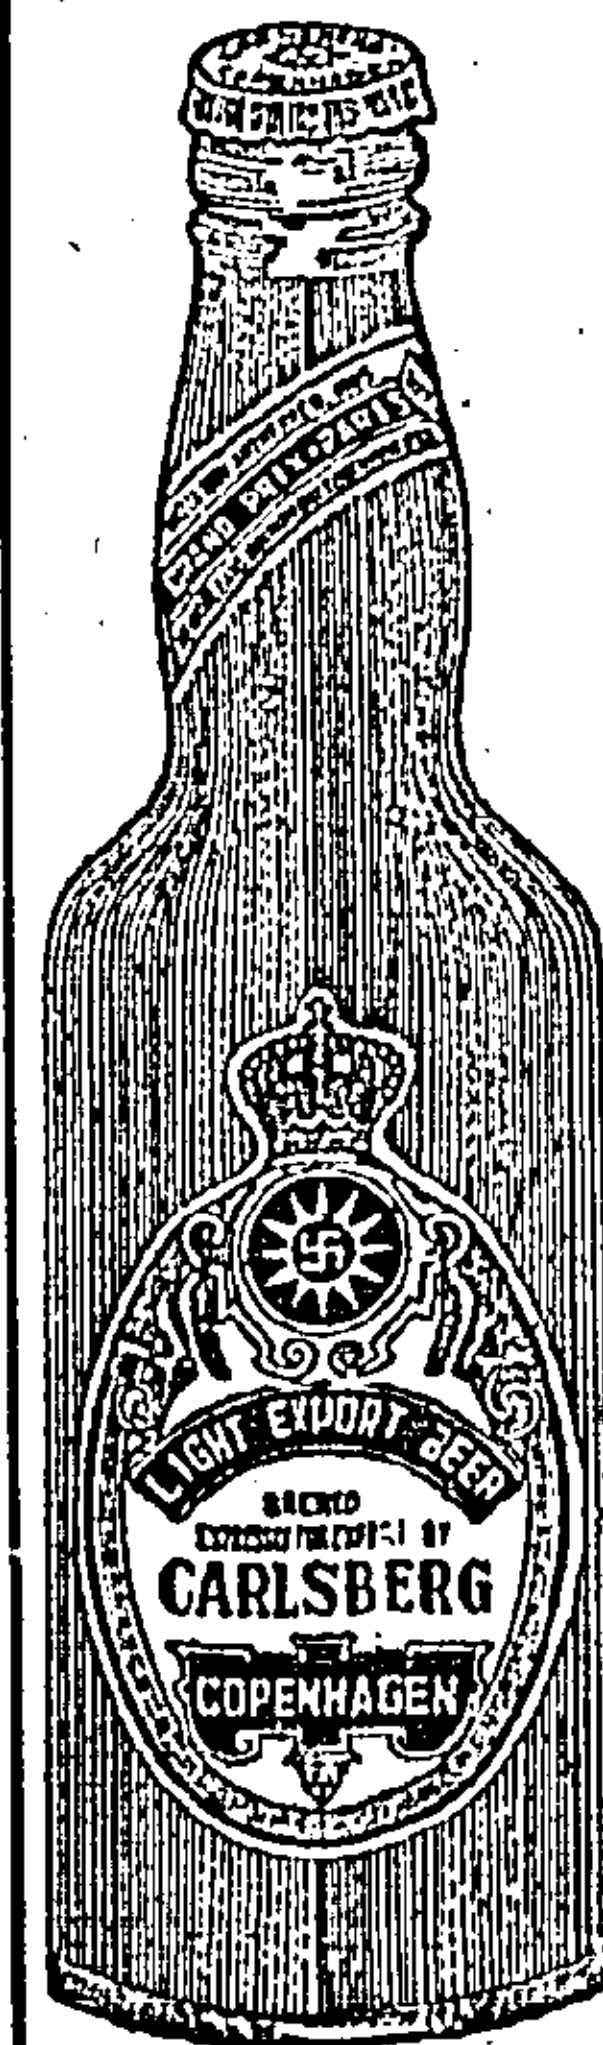

'ASPRO' IS A SAFE & EFFECTIVE GARGLE FOR SORE THROAT & TONSILLITIS

Two 'ASPRO' Tablets dissolved in four tablespoonfuls of water make a very excellent gargle for sore throat, tonsillitis, and act as a deterrent. The reason why 'ASPRO' has such quick action in banishing influenza and cold attacks is, first, because it is an antipyretic or fever destroyer, secondly, when ingested in the system it is a powerful internal antiseptic and germicide.

You can prevent 'Flu' by taking 2 'ASPRO' Tablets at the first sign of a Cold and 2 tablets every three hours afterwards until the symptoms disappear, a hot whisky or lemon drink to be taken with the last dose before going to bed. It is advisable when taking 'ASPRO' for Influenza and Colds to keep the body warmly clad in order to prevent chill.

A Shantihli lace gown over a white satin slip was worn by the bride. Miss Rose Lee wore shell-pink or gaudie gown over a satin slip while the bridesmaids wore shell-pink or gaudie. They chose organdie garland to match and carried shawes of pale pink gladioli, supplied by the Clover Flower Shop.

The Rev. E. G. Powell officiated at the ceremony while the duties of best man were undertaken by Mr. Ma Wai-kong. The honeymoon is to be spent in Shanghai.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"Pat" Patterson, the English stage star who appears in "Bottoms Up", the Fox production with Spencer Tracy and John Boles coming to the King's Theatre on Sunday, always applies a powder base, rubs ice over that, and then puts on her powder. She has a lovely skin, and claims that this is her main beauty secret. Instead of using water to smooth the grease paint on for picture make-up, she uses witch hazel, as it keeps her "Pat" goes for an hour's horseback ride. That is her way of keeping in trim. She was very much amazed at the American riding habits, the informality of them, and even the use of a riding crop. "I've dreamed like that in England for years, I am sure that a law would be passed in the House of Commons against it," said the attractive newcomer, with a humorous twinkle. However, Miss Patterson approves of America's indoor riding attire, though not as comfortable as she has adopted it herself to a certain extent, and says it is a lot more fun.

"Moulin Rouge"

The dual role of stage struck wife and fascinating French musical comedy star which Constance Bennett plays in "Moulin Rouge", her first 20th Century picture opening tomorrow at the Alhambra and World Theatres, also marks the first time that this charming actress has had the opportunity of portraying two distinctly different characters in one picture. From whirlwind start to amusing finish, "Moulin Rouge" deals with the highly dramatic and entertaining episodes which develop from her adoption of a disguise and a French accent, involving the director, believing husband in situations that bring him perilously near the danger line leading to the divorce court. Franchot Tone plays Constance's husband. The second male lead is played by Tullio Carminati, who will be remembered for his outlandish success in "Strictly Dishonorable" and "Music in the Air." Much of the droll comedy falls to the role of Mrs. Morris, played by Helen Westley, considered one of the foremost character actresses of the American stage. Miss Westley is one of the founders of the New York Theatre Guild and is frequently cast in its productions. She accepted this, her first film role, in a spirit of adventure, largely because she and Franchot Tone are old friends, and she has known Miss Bennett since the latter was a child. "Moulin Rouge" is a presentation of Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl F. Zanuck and is released through United Artists.

"Mystery of Mr. X"

If you are thrilled by an ingeniously woven tale of mystery and intrigue, touched by a charming love story and given to violently waving your hat at the dramatically graduated climax of a genuine thriller, then you had better go to the Queen's Theatre today and see Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new hair-raiser, the "Mystery of Mr. X." Directed by Edgar Selwyn, than whom there is no one able, adapted from Philip MacDonald's sensational Crime Club novel, "Mystery of the Dead Police," the new film is all an exciting mystery should be, and more. There are thrills from the moment you enter and see Robert Montgomery, as Revel, gentleman crook, gracefully lift the Drayton diamond from a safe while the shadow of "X", London's notorious murderer, passes by, to the final show-down between the engaging young crook and the fiend. As Revel, Montgomery is superb. His clever characterization breathes reality into the exciting role. You believe he is quick-witted enough to have stolen the diamond, to run the risks he does. You understand and sympathize with his motive in this. And by the time the picture has whirled on to the final sequence, you are sitting up on the edge of your seat, hoping he won't meet the fate of the nine policemen, all victims of the arch-fiend "X." Elizabeth Allan is charming as ever in the role of Jane, daughter of the Chief Commissioner of Scotland Yard. She manages to reveal a "love interest" that vies happily with the more adventurous aspects of the play. Lewis Stone and Henry Stephenson, both consummate actors, seem to embody the essence of Scotland Yard's fine force, in their roles of Chief Commissioner and Detective. The picture is a "love interest" that vies happily with the more adventurous aspects of the play. Lewis Stone and Henry Stephenson, both consummate actors, seem to embody the essence of Scotland Yard's fine force, in their roles of Chief Commissioner and Detective. The picture is a "love interest" that vies happily with the more adventurous aspects of the play.

"The Girl in 419"

W. It goes on inside a police emergency hospital, from the moment an accident or crime resulting in injury is reported until the victim has reached the physicians' hands is brought to the screen for the first time in "The Girl in 419", a romantic drama currently at the King's Theatre. The thrilling routine of events in such an institution never seen in its entirety by the layman, even when he is treated there, furnishes the background on which James Dunn, Gloria Stuart and other players move. The picture shows in thrilling fashion what happens from the moment the switchboard operator receives a call telling of an accident until the physicians finish working on the patient. The patching of the ambulance, reception of the patient, treatment, and other details are included.

"This Side of Heaven"

The sacredness of the home and the loyalty of a family to all its members are lessons that are vividly illustrated in "This Side of Heaven", the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture now showing at the Alhambra Theatre. The story relates the climatic events in the lives of various members of a family, all of which takes place currently. Lionel Barrymore plays the father who is threatened with imprisonment for embezzlement at the all-important time when the family reaches high hopes of financially re-improving itself. Fay Bainter appears in her first role as Barrymore's wife, and their children, Mary Carlisle and Tom Brown. Ample love interest is injected into the picture by the romances of Miss Carlisle and Henry Wadsworth, and by the triangle of Miss Clarke, Eddie Nugent and Osiow Stevens. Humor is spread through the story by Una Merkel, who plays one of her most delightful roles as "Birdie", the family housemaid.

Chinese Musical Romance
"Song Parade", an all-talking-and-singing Chinese picture, featuring the famous actor, Sit Kok Sui, and his wife, Tong Suet Ling, is now showing at the Central Theatre. The story tells of a young man who, instead of going to school, takes on a job as composer of musical plays for a certain theatre. It happens that business is bad and the management decide to engage a well-known actor to appear for a few nights. The actor refuses to appear on the opening night on the ground that the management could not get him a first-class part to appear with him. The composer is therefore persuaded to perform in his stead and scores a great success. When the father of the composer comes to know of his son's doings, he gets so angry that he takes severely ill in hospital. The story ends happily.

NATION WRECKERS

JOHNSON'S ATTACK ON OGDEN MILLS

Washington, June 1.
A slashing attack against critics of the N.K.A. was made by General Johnson in a broadcast address before the National Catholic Alumni Federation today.
General Johnson declared that "you couldn't take a code away from one of the coded industries with a crowbar or a machinegun." He described Mr. Ogden Mills as the mouthpiece of a crew of nation wreckers.

Meanwhile, the strike situation is still tense: President Roosevelt's attempt to placate the iron and steel industry by promising the employees that elections shall be held under Government supervision for collective bargaining have apparently failed, and the steel workers' union describes it as "just so much bunk."
The text of the order for curtailment of production is cancelled.
The situation at Toledo has somewhat improved by the removal of one third of the troops, whose presence irritated the strikers.—Reuter.

GREATER MARCUS SHOW

LAVISH PRAISE FROM SHANGHAI PRESS

The impression made in Tokyo and Shanghai by the Marcus Show which will open a brief engagement at the Queen's commencing matinee Sunday week, has cast foreign theatrical attractions in a new role. Theatregoers in the Far East have finally been accorded an offering of genuine merit, according to the press of both cities. The following from Shanghai Evening Post and Mercury of May 9, is typical:

"Thinking back over the last 15 years, memory brings up only one show which in any way approached the Greater Marcus Show which has kept the Carlton packed for the last two weeks. This troupe was that headed by Julian Ellinge, famous American female impersonator who started life, as we recall it, on a ranch as a cowhand. A cowboy, let it be said, who was an ace in the theatrical profession, one in which he rose to become an outstanding member found about two decades ago.

None of these companies who have toured the Far East states the paper, approach the Greater Marcus Show. In numbers alone this troupe doubles and almost trebles the shows which have invaded Shanghai—circuses, of course, excepted.

In addition literally tons of props and costumes have been carried here across the Pacific, along with equipment to insure smooth and efficient operation of the scenery.

This type of organization is something new to Shanghai, and its newness makes it just that much more welcome here. It is several hundred per cent. above any standard which earlier profes-

Trade Marks And Patents

GOOD PROGRESS AT CONFERENCE

Although some important proposals, notably those relating to false indications of origin, have failed to secure the unanimity essential to an amendment of the convention, substantial progress has been achieved in other directions. For instance, the Conference has agreed to abolish the reservation of the rights of third parties which has so seriously prejudiced priority rights of inventors, to place further restrictions upon the revocation of patents, and to recognize the principle of protection of trade marks registered in another country after proper registration in the country of origin.

It has also been accepted that the inventor shall be entitled to have his name mentioned in a patent, that the period of priority given by the convention shall not be deducted from the term of the patent, and that claims to multiple priority in patent applications should be allowed.—British Wireless.

Several companies have set in this city, and the promise of Mr. A. B. Marcus that he will be back again with a bigger and better troupe would seem to us another reason for being mighty glad we're here because we're here. To Messrs. Marcus Hugo we extend, in behalf of this city and particularly the American community, sincerest sympathies; best wishes for the continued success of their tour and ever assurance of a hearty welcome and whole-hearted support upon their return to these shores.

TRUNK TELEPHONE SYSTEM

NANKING NETWORK
PROJECT

Shanghai, June 2.
The Nanking Ministry of Communications has announced that work will be started on the establishment of a long distance telephone system connecting nine provinces this month.

The enterprise is financed by a loan from the British Boxer Indemnity Fund.

The trunk lines of the system will be as follows:

(1) From Nanking to Hankow via Shanghai, (2) from Nanking to Hankow via Wuhu and Kiukiang, (3) from Nanking to Peking via Hsuehchow, Pangfu, Tsinan and Tientsin, and (4) from Hsuehchow to Chongchov (Hunan) via Loyang. Branch lines will include those from Kiukiang to Nanchang from Hankow to Changsha and from Tsinan to Tientsin. Purchases of materials for the enterprise have been mainly made in England.—Central News.

Mr. W. N. Wells-Henderson a partner in Messrs. S. E. Levy & Co., Shanghai, arrived in the Colony on the President Jefferson to open offices for this firm in Hongkong, where they will deal in all stocks and commodities quoted on the principal American markets. Messrs. Levy & Co.'s New York correspondents are Messrs. White, Weld & Co.
